THE CAINE MUTINY

(Beginning a 60-Part Serial of Herman Wouk's Best-Selling Novel of Naval War)

By HERMAN WOUK

It was not mutiny in the old-time sense, of course, with flashing of cutlasses, a captain in chains, and desperate sailors turning outlaws. After all, it happened in 1944 in the United States Navy. But the court of inquiry recommended trial for mutiny, and the episode became known as "the Caine mutiny" throughout the service.

The story begins with Willie Keith because the event turned on his personality as the massive door of a vault turns on a small jewel bearing.

CHAPTER 1

He was of medium height, somewhat chubby, and good looking, with curly red hair and an innocent, gay face, more remarkable for a humorous air about the eyes and large mouth than for any strength of chin or nobility of nose. He had graduated from Princeton in 1941 with high marks in all subjects except mathematics and sciences. His academic specialty had been comparative literature. But his real career at Princeton had consisted of playing the piano and inventing bright little songs for parties and shows.

He kissed his mother good-bye on the sidewalk near the corner of Broadway and 116th Street in New York City, on a cold sunny morning in December, 1942. The family Cadillac was parked beside them, its motor running, but maintaining a well-bred silence. Around them stood the dingy grey-and-red buildings of Columbia University.

"Don't you think," said Mrs. Keith, smiling bravely, "that we might stop in that drug store first and have a sandwich?"

She had driven her son to the midshipmen school from their home in Manhasset, despite Willie's protests. Willie had wanted to take the train. It would have seemed more like departing for the wars; he did not like being escorted to the gates of the Navy by his mother. But Mrs. Keith had prevailed as usual.

"The Navy'll feed me, Mom. Don't worry."

He kissed her for the second time and glanced nervously about, hoping that no military men were observing the overtender scene. Mrs. Keith pressed his shoulder lovingly.

"I know you'll do wonderfully, Willie. Just as you always have."

"Aye, aye, Mother." Willie strode along the brick walk past the School of Journalism, and down a few steps to the entrance of Furnald Hall, formerly a dormitory for law students. A grizzled, pudgy Navy chief with four red service stripes on his blue coat stood in the doorway. Mimeographed papers in his hand flapped in the breeze. Willie wondered whether to salute, and swiftly decided that the gesture did not go well with a brown raglan coat and green pork-pie hat. He had completely forgotten his mother.

The chief opened the door invitingly. Willie Seward Keith stepped out of the sunshine across the threshold. It was done as easily and noiselessly as Alice's stepping through the looking glass; and like Alice, Willie Keith passed into a new and exceedingly strange world.

With forty other upright pink animals he was herded into a large examination room. His lungs, liver, heart, eyes, ears, all the apparatus he had been using since birth, were investigated by hard-eyed pharmacists' mates, who prodded and poked him like suspicious women about to buy a turkey in the market.

Next the Navy now dressed him in blue jumper and trousers, black shoes, black socks, and a perky sailor hat, marked with the special blue stripe of a midshipman. Then it filled his arms with books of all shapes, colors, sizes, and degrees of wear, and told his room was on the top floor of the dormitory.

When Willie reached the top floor, he walked down the hall, scanning the names posted outside each room, and found a door labeled:

Room 1013
Keefer
Keith
Keggs

He went in, and dropped the books on the bare springs of a cot. He heard the twang of springs again directly behind him.

"My name's Keggs," said the horse face, poking an arm toward him. Willie shook the hand, which enveloped his in a big moist grip.

"I'm Keith."

Anscomb Tells Party He'll Quit as Tory Leader

Urges Followers to Action At Vancouver Meeting

VANCOUVER, Oct. 18 (CP)—With a parting exhortation to his followers to fight "every election, everywhere at every time," Herbert Anscomb today confirmed reports of his decision to resign as provincial leader of the Progressive Conservative Party.

Beaten in his own Oak Bay riding in the June 12 balloting which also saw all but four of the party's other standard bearers defeated, the bluff, bull-necked Mr Anscomb made his intentions known in a speech to the annual meeting of the British Columbia Progressive Conservative Association.

He declined comment on a dispatch from Victoria which hinted he may be approached to run as a Progressive Conservative candidate for the capital city in the next federal election. The dispatch said the offer would be made if Mr. Anscomb retired from the provincial field.

In announcing his retirement, Mr. Anscomb said: "My own view is that there should be a convention as rapidly as you can get one. I propose . . . to tender my resignation to that convention."

LEADER SINCE 1946

Party leader since 1946, he was in fighting fettle for what may have been his last appearance on the job. He insisted that the Progressive Conservative showing in June was "not bad at all." He reminded his listeners that the coalition with the Liberals was maintained until early 1952 "not because I said so, but because you in convention instructed me to."

He said he had urged Conservative associations in both Similkameen and Columbia ridings to contest the Nov. 24 by-elections in which the Social Credit government hopes to win seats for two non-member cabinet ministers.

"Unless a man who is running a business keeps his goods before the public, they will finally go off the market. And that is true, too, of politics.".

Then he declared, "I want to say that the Conservative Party should fight every election, everywhere at every time."

The younger members were in a fighting mood as the 75 delegates gathered. Led by Arthur (Slim) McCarthur, the party's North Vancouver candidate in June, and Kamloops M.P. Davie Fulton, they moved to set aside the order of routine business proposed by association president Major-General G. R. Pearkes, V.C.

They wanted immediate discussion on a convention date. But their amendment was defeated 46 to 29.

Prince George Runs Aground In Heavy Fog

Damages Propeller But in No Danger

Four Pacific Salvage Company tugs this morning rushed to the aid of the Canadian National Railways' newest cruise ship, Ss. Prince George, after she nosed into Ripple Point in Johnstone Strait.

The ship pulled herself off the point after she had lost her starboard propeller.

The luxury liner was still at her anchorage in Knox Bay at noon today with tugs standing by. The fog had lifted.

Under an escort of tugs, she is expected to sail shortly under her own steam for Vancouver, arriving here Sunday morning.

The ship's run will be taken over by the Ss. Prince Rupert Monday night, a company spokesman said.

Albert Smith, Victoria manager of Pacific Salvage, reported that Capt. Ed Caldwell of Prince George, said by radio-telephone that the ship's pumps were handling the small amount of water she was taking.

HEADING SOUTH

She was heading south through Johnstone Strait in dense fog at 3.26 a.m. when she glanced off Ripple Point, where rocks jut out from the coast of Vancouver Island near the entrance to Seymour Narrows. She suffered slight damage forward, as well as serious damage to a propeller.

The tug Skeena Beaver dropped her log tow when Prince George wirelesed for aid, and reached the ship at 8 a.m. Three other tugs, Rosario Straits, Charlotte Straits, and Nanaimo Chief, were expected at the scene at noon today.

NO ONE INJURED

None of the 260 passengers or 130 crewmen were injured, and the shipmaster did not plan to have them taken off.

Prince George was built in Victoria in 1947, by Yarrows Ltd., the first large passenger vessel to be constructed in Canada in 25 years. She is 350 feet overall, with a gross tonnage of 5,700.

She met her accident 30 miles north of dread Ripple Rock, scene of many marine mishaps. She was returning from a regular weekly run to B.C. coast points and Ketchikan, Alaska.

CITY EQUALS FALL MARK FOR DAYS WITHOUT RAIN

Today Victoria equalled a 1935 record of 21 consecutive rainless days in the late September-early-October period, and far surpassed the former October record of 14 days without rain, set in 1945.

Although a spattering of rain fell between Sept. 5 and 11—0.21 inch—the last rain of any consequence occurred Aug. 22, when a total of 0.21 inch fell between 5.30 a.m. and 1.30 p.m.

Previous to that the only rain worthy of mention was a fall of 0.70 inch on July 22.

Total for the first nine months of the year is only 10.52 inches, compared with average fall for this period of 15.19 inches.

Indications are that the present drought will continue. The weather forecast predicts some cloud on Sunday, caused by a disturbance to the south, but there will be sunny periods during the day, according to the weatherman.

Winds will be light, and temperatures will range between 48 and 58 degrees.

Coal Strike Threatens U.S.

350,000 'Certain' to Walk Out Monday; Wage Board Cuts Award

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18 (CP)—The Wage Stabilization Board today chopped 21 per cent off the $1.90-daily wage boost won from coal operators by John L. Lewis.

It was taken for granted the refusal to approve the full amount would set off a general mine strike.

Public members of the board, headed by Chairman Archibald Cox, joined with industry members in knocking 40 cents off the increase. Labor members voted to approve the full $1.90.

150,000 OUT

More than 150,000 of Lewis' miners already had walked off the job in a protest strike this week when their October pay cheques failed to include the raise.

Few mines work over the week-end, but a general shutdown was expected to occur Monday.

Coal stockpiles in the hands of consumers averaged about 80 days and no immediate industrial or home heating effect from the anticipated strike was expected.

The W.S.B. ruling on the case was a major surprise. Cox told a press conference that the $1.50 gives the soft-coal miners "equal treatment" with other wage groups, most of whom he said "will have received measurably less."

Approval of the full amount, Cox said, would have provided a wage increase "greater than any consistent with an honest stabilization program."

The decision affects some 350,000 miners in soft-coal pits. A new contract for hard-coal miners is now being negotiated.

Cox said Lewis and the soft-coal operators have been notified that their contract is illegal and inflationary and that the wage boost must be cut back.

The coal case involved no dispute between Lewis and the industry. The question was only whether the increase they negotiated was legal and not inflationary.

Actually the new Lewis contract could not be honored legaliv without W.S.B. approval. The amount of the raise is nearly twice as much as that which cost of-living pay regulations automatically allow.

But labor members of the 18-man board argued during board deliberations the past four days that other pay regulations, coupled with the rise in the cost of living since last winter, justified approval of the contract.

Liberals Delay Naming New Leader

B.C. Liberal executive committeemen have decided to postpone the all-important business of choosing a new provincial party leader until next sprnig.

Decision to delay was made by the advisory council of the B.C. Liberal Association, meeting in Vancouver. The ruling meant a cancellation of the association which was scheduled for Nov. 14 and 15 at Penticton.

The convention will be rescheduled around Easter, when the Commons has its spring recess.

The two new federal cabinet ministers, Fisheries Minister Sinclair and Solicitor-General Campney, may have had something to do with the decision. They arrived in Vancouver Friday morning and went immediately to the advisory council meeting, which was held behind closed doors.

Mr. Campney denied he'd returned from Ottawa to tell B.C. Liberals what they should do, but he made it clear he disagreed with the decision of Liberals not to contest the two provincial by-elections scheduled for November in the interior.

"My attitude is that you fight every election and every by-election," he declared. "You don't concede anything without a fight."

Fear of Reds Leads Chinese To Take Life

Young Immigrant Dies in Alberta

ROCKY MOUNTAIN HOUSE, Alta., Oct. 18 (CP)—Police reported that a 21-year-old Chinese who came to Canada only five months ago took his own life here Friday. Friends said Gin Kwong Ken feared Communists would get him.

Sam Mah, owner of the restaurant at which the lad was working, said Gin became despondent after receiving a letter from his parents in China in which they urged him to return home because the Communists were forcing them to get him back.

Mr. Mah said his employee broke down and freely told those at the restaurant of his troubles. "The Communists have my father and mother and they will get me," Ken was quoted as saying.

Police said Ken died in hospital five hours after he had cut his throat with a butcher knife in his room.

Communist extortion notes started coming into Victoria late last year, demanding local Chinese send amounts ranging from $200 to $1,000 (Canadian) to protect kinfolk in Red-controlled China. Although only a few were made public it was estimated about 200 notes were sent here in one batch. Vancouver Chinese received about 1,000.

The Red extortion racket was so widespread in the United States last December that the federal government threatened to arrest any Chinese Americans who were found to be making "blackmail" payments. The government threatened to prosecute under laws dealing with "trading with the enemy."

It is suspected Red Chinese agents operate in practically every sizeable Chinese community and serve as informants as to those who have money and who might be approached to pay protection money for relatives in China.

Gravely Ill

EAST GRINSTEAD, Sussex, Eng., Oct. 18 (AP)—The condition of A. A. Milne, 79-year-old author and playwright who suffered a stroke Monday, was described as unchanged today but marked by "gradual deterioration." Milne is noted mainly for his children's stories.

BOOS AND HISSES

Truman-Ike Fight Waxes Hot, Heavy

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18 (CP)—While President Truman and Gen. Dwight Eisenhower volleyed sharp criticisms, Governor Adlai Stevenson was questing for votes deep in Texas today.

Truman's rousing reception in New England was near a close. He winds up his stumping tour for the Democratic ticket in New York tonight.

The president stirred storms of applause in Boston's Symphony Hall Friday night with a charge that Eisenhower, by supporting Republican Senators Joseph McCarthy of Wisconsin and William Jenner of Indiana, has endorsed a "reign of terror by slander." The audience hissed and booed the senators' names.

Eisenhower moves into New England Monday, hard on Truman's heels.

At Newark, N.J., Friday night, Eisenhower praised Gen. George C. Marshall, his one-time army boss, as a "great American patriot."

He repeated that, as the Republican candidate for president, he listens to advice but makes his own decisions and is still a "no deal" man.

This was in obvious reply to Truman's charge Thursday that he was not "sticking by" Marshall, and to Democratic accusations that he has come under the thumb of McCarthy and Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio.

As the general motored through lunch-hour crowds at industrial plants Friday, there were some vehement boos and shouts of "Jersey for Stevenson." Otherwise he drew friendly crowds.

At Fort Worth and Dallas Friday, Stevenson challenged Governor Allan Shivers and other Texas Democrats who have spurned the party's national ticket. Shivers had said he will not vote for Stevenson.

Fog Causes Traffic Snarl In Vancouver

VANCOUVER, Oct. 18 (CP)—Thousands of workers were late for their jobs today as the heaviest fog of the session rolled over Greater Vancouver.

Motor traffic was slowed to a crawl and many air line flights were cancelled. Trans-Canada Air Lines landed its planes at Abbotsford and carried passengers to and from Vancouver by bus.

Indonesian Capital Quiet After Riots

JAKARTA, Oct. 18 (CP)—The Indonesian capital was quiet today after short-lived demonstrations against parliament and signs of anti-Dutch sentiment. But a government spokesman said the situation was still serious.

Travelers arriving in Singapore said that under the outward calm was an undercurrent of anxiety about a possible military coup.

Some members of parliament, reported arrested Friday "for their own protection," were released today. Among those arrested, the Indonesian press agency Aneta reported, were former Premier Mohammed Sukiman and former Justice Minister Mohammed Yamin.

Long Fishing Strike Ended

VANCOUVER, Oct. 18 (CP).—The longest strike in the history of the West Coast fishing industry sputtered out today. Between 3,000 and 4,000 salmon fishermen had tied up their boats for 41 days.

The United Fishermen and Allied Workers' Union (T.L.C.) announced that its members had voted 70 per cent in favor of an agreement worked out by Premier W. A. C. Bennett and Labor Minister Lyle Wicks. The fishermen are expected to return to sea Sunday or Monday. The operators had accepted the settlement terms earlier this week.

The fishermen tied up the salmon fleet September 6 for maintenance of last year's prices for chum salmon—between eight and 11 cents a pound, according to area. The operators originally offered 5½ cents.

Under the accepted settlement terms, the fishermen will get six to eight cents a pound.

U.K. Seeks Clarification Of Iran Break

TEHRAN, Iran, Oct. 18 (AP)—U.S. Ambassador Loy Henderson called on Prime Minister Mohammed Mossadegh today to ask "clarification" of the announcement that Iran would sever diplomatic relations with Britain because of the prolonged oil dispute.

Reliable sources said it was safe to assume that Henderson was inquiring whether the break would be partial or complete. A partial break might leave consulates in both London and Tehran. A complete break would entail recall of all diplomatic personnel from both capitals.

Reds Repeat Truce Demand Before U.N.

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., Oct. 18 (CP)—Russia's Foreign Minister, Andrei Vishinsky, today repeated Communist demands for an immediate truce in Korea on terms which the United Nations has repeatedly rejected.

These terms include the return of all prisoners to their homelands. The U.N. has steadfastly refused to repatriate forcibly those Communist prisoners who say they do not want to go, and this issue has deadlocked the armistice negotiations at Panmunjom.

COST M-G-M $700,000

Temperament Ends Lanza Movie Career

BY JAMES BACON

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 18 (AP).—Is Mario Lanza through in the movies?

Yes, a check of top industry disclosed today. The movie-makers, almost to a man, believe the booming tenor sang past the finish in his row with M-G-M over the ill - fated "Student Prince."

Lanza failed to show up for the picture although other members of the cast, including co-stars Ann Blythe and Edmund Gwenn hung around for a week until the production was canceled.

The movie moguls hold that an artist can be temperamental before a picture starts production. In fact, then it often makes good publicity. But when temperament sets in after production that costs money. It cost M.G.M. $700,000, the studio claims, and in this day of rising television and declining movie box office, that's a sin not easily absolved.

Lanza himself is mum to charges that he is a super-eccentric in a town where eccentricity is the norm of behavior; that he is a fellow kicking $1,000,000 a year in the face; that he desperately is trying to ruin his career.

Lanza is not only on suspension from M-G-M but also the defendant in a studio suit for $5,195,888 damages. That represents M-G-M's claim of loss from the shelving of the picture, plus $4,500,000 in anticipated profits. The latter figure is a conservative one. Lanza's "The Great Caruso" grossed $19,000000 its first year and some countries haven't been heard from yet.

ONE WOMAN'S DAY

By NANCY HODGES

CALLOW AND HIS COACH

VETERANS IN OUR local hospital, especially paraplegics, who are able to enjoy an occasional respite from the tedium and monotony of ward life by trips in the special bus designed by a sightless, paralyzed veteran in a Halifax, N.S., hospital, will share in the widespread regret at the news that he has recently had to undergo the amputation of both legs.

Walter Callow is his name, a name now known throughout Canada. I had the privilege—and I mean "privilege"—of meeting him briefly while on a visit to Nova Scotia several years ago. And it was an experience I shall not easily forget.

CHEERY OPTIMIST

PARALYZED AS A result of a flying accident while serving with the Royal Flying Corps during World War One, the 57-year-old Canadian has been unable to move a muscle since 1937. To add to his handicap he lost his sight in 1939. For 20 years he has been a patient in Camp Hill Military Hospital, Halifax.

It was there that I saw him. I had rather dreaded meeting this tragic casualty of war, but I need not have worried. Instead of an embittered, unhappy man, I found a cheery, optimistic soul who was so busy trying to help others that he hadn't time to think about his own handicap.

INVENTED BUS

TRUE, BEING HUMAN, like the rest of us—although some of those close to him in the hospital look upon him almost as a saint—Walter Callow has had his dark hours of despondency when life didn't seem to be worth living. And who could wonder at it, lying like a log, unable even to see anything of what went on around him?

But he gradually overcame it by determining to make himself of some use, especially to his veteran comrades. That was when his idea of a specially designed coach, capable of taking wheelchairs, had its genesis.

MANY OBSTACLES

IN THE FACE of untold obstacles, he persisted in his plan and gradually worked it out in its fundamentals. Needlessless to say, he had many setbacks, but, while at times he lost heart, he always came back, confident that, somehow, the many problems facing him could be solved and his plan brought to fruition. So impressed were the hospital authorities and the nurses by his courage and initiative that they did all in their power to help his project along, providing him with a specially equipped room-office in the residential section of the hospital.

Here he interviewed coachmakers and automotive engineers, anyone whom he could interest in his plans. Finally he evolved a bus designed to carry 12 wheelchairs, all of which could stretch right out if necessary. The coach has a ramp for the easier entry and egress of the chairs which, once inside, are locked into position to prevent accident.

FINANCING PROBLEM

DESPITE THE practicability of his design, Mr. Callow, like many another inventor, found the financing the hardest part of the whole undertaking. Its very nature made it costly to build, and the industrial and business leaders of his province saw little value in the project.

However, the school children of Nova Scotia saw the Callow coach with different eyes. After the commercial interests turned down his plea for help, the schools rallied to his support wholeheartedly. They raised funds in countless small ways until, with the aid of a bequest from a Nova Scotia estate, enough money was realized to order the first bus, at a cost of more than $18,000. The youngsters still make a yearly contribution to the Callow coach fund.

EXAMPLE TO ALL

QUITE APART FROM what he has meant to former "shut-ins" in veterans' hospitals across Canada, Walter Callow stands out as a shining example of what an indomitable will and endless courage can do to overcome seemingly insurmountable handicaps, and of the driving force of an urge to help others.

And from what I know of youngsters, I feel sure that the school children of Nova Scotia will grieve as sincerely as anyone to learn that this veteran, who has dedicated his life to the cause of his fellow-sufferers, has now had to sacrifice his legs, as well as his sight and feeling, as a result of his war service.

Big Expense Anticipated If Wires Go Underground

Converting the city of Victoria's electrical system from overhead to underground wiring would cost somewhere between $8,000,000 and $12,000,000, G. F. Green, light and power superintendent for B.C. Electric, said Friday night.

Speaking at a meeting of the B.C. Engineering Society and the Engineering Institute of Canada in the government's Douglas Building, Mr. Green said the cost of converting the main business district alone would run in excess of $1,000,000.

Kenneth Reid, Victoria's superintendent of street lighting, listed eight major advantages to having wires underground. He thought too much stress was placed on cost. This cost, he pointed out, was usually between two and one-half to five and one-half times as much as installation of overhead wiring.

He argued, however, that progress always brought additional expense.

"The first concrete sidewalks were many times the cost of wooden ones," he observed.

Accuses Japan Of Aggression

PUSAN, Korea, Oct. 18 (Reuters)—Clarence Rhee, South Korean government spokesman, today charged Japan with attempting to resume her aggression."

In a strongly-worded official denunciation of Japanese policies, he said the "traditional Japanese characteristics of defamation, blackmail, aggression and tricks are making enemies out of friendly nations."

He centred his attack on alleged illegal Japanese fishing in Korean waters and smuggling of Japanese products into Korea.

Since 1947 the South Korean navy has taken 140 Japanese fishing vessels into custody and returned 103. The Japanese maritime safety board now has ordered all its patrol vessels to be armed to deal with any "interference."

NO LONGER A GAME

Today's Newspapers Face Many Issues

Publisher Tells C.W.N.A. Delegates Seriousness of Growing Reponsibilities

The newspaper game stopped being a game many years ago, Stuart Keate, publisher of The Times, told delegates to the 34th annual convention of the B.C. Division, Canadian Weekly Newspaper Association, at a banquet in the Empress Hotel Friday evening.

"Never before have newspapers faced a more serious responsibility than they do today," he said. "Never has the need for honest, accurate information been more vital. It is our clear duty to create the best possible medium of communication; to act as a hub and nerve centre of communication in our community."

As a newspaperman speaking to others in his own profession, Mr. Keate discussed the difficulties, restrictions, responsibilities—and ever-increasing costs — of publishing a newspaper.

"More and more, control of daily newspapers is slipping away from the front office," he said. "It would be a very brave—or very foolish — publisher who claimed today that he had absolute control of his staff. In effect, they tell him how many hours they will work, and what their pay will be. He can't fire a man without reasons in writing, and these must be subject to debate."

NOT A DYING PROFESSION

He added, "Now let's get this straight. I'm all in favor of everybody earning high wages, but I'm also convinced that the health of employees pay cheques should be in some sort of ratio to the economic health of the whole paper. I for one do not propose to stand idly by and see newspapers go down the drain because of unreasonable wage demands, because of feather-bedding, laziness or incompetence."

He pointed out that the newspaper profession "if not a dying one, is certainly a shrinking one. There are today in the United States 40 per cent less daily newspapers than there were in 1929.

"In the United States, there are competing daily newspapers in only one city out of 12.

"In a comparatively short period, the newspaper 'game' has matured into a business," he said, "a big, hard-headed business with tough problems of labor and supply—and where it was once considered easy for a newspaper to net 15 per cent or more on its gross revenues, they now have to struggle to make 5 per cent."

Mr. Keate was introduced by Leslie Barber, publisher of the Chilliwack Progress. Lew Griffith, publisher of the Cariboo Observer, was installed as president of the B.C. division, succeeding Victor Ball, Fernie Free Press.

Clerk Rapped For Attending Red Parley

VANCOUVER, Oct. 18 (CP)—The Vancouver Library Board Friday ordered a suspension of a branch library clerk unless she can satisfactorily explain a report that she is attending a Communist conference in Red China.

The clerk, Mrs. Ray Gardner, is scheduled to return to her job Nov. 1 after being given a two-months leave of absence.

The board reached its decision after reading a letter from Mayor Fred Hume which said that "according to press reports Mrs. Gardner is at present in attendance at a Communist-sponsored gathering in Peiping, China."

The mayor added in his letter: "Many citizens, including myself, are greatly concerned that a civic employee should be attending a conference sponsored by Communists who are daily killing Canadian soldiers in Korea."

BETTER THAN AVERAGE

H. M. Boyce, library board chairman, said: "Her employment history while a member of the clerical staff indicates she was a better than average employee. So far as I have been able to learn, she has not unduly discussed nor paraded her political views with other members of the staff or library users."

To a question "have we evidence she is in China?" a portion of a personal letter from Mrs. Gardner to a library staff member was read.

"You will be surprised to know we are in Prague and leaving for Moscow, from where we are going to Peiping to attend the Asia and Pacific Conference," the letter said.

Mrs. Gardner, 25, was born in Edmonton, and is the wife of Vancouver writer Ray Gardner.

Coronation Seats May Go to Vote

CANBERRA, Oct. 17 (Reuters)—Prime Minister Robert Menzies said today there probably will have to be a ballot to decide which Australians get seats for the Queen's coronation next summer. He did not say how many seats will be reserved for Australia.

WELCOME PLANS TAKE SHAPE FOR ONE OF FIGHTING FIVE

Preparations are going forward to give Sgt. Richard Buxton a hero's welcome when he comes home from Korea next month.

The sergeant, who has been awarded the D.C.M. for bravery, is expected to leave Japan Nov. 13. He will be feted by nine Esquimalt community organizations, of which the Canadian Legion has been asked to assume leadership. Esquimalt Council announced Friday night it will donate $100 to the "Welcome Home" party. The Legion Branch will meet Wednesday to make plans.

The 26-year-old soldier, one of five brothers still in the army (three others have also served), was cited for "determination, personal courage and tactical skill" exhibited under enemy fire.

7,000 C.D. Wardens Sought In Greater Victoria Area

Recruiting of 7,000 wardens for Greater Victoria will begin Monday at Civil Defense Headquarters, target area director L. G. Hatcher, announces.

The figures, set by Ottawa, call for a peacetime complement of 700 wardens, but registration is being accepted from those who would wish to serve in this capacity in time of emergency as well, when the larger number would be required.

Training will take place in the Cormorant Street headquarters. One warden's post is needed for every 400-500 persons, with 28 each of three Greater Victoria posts in each of four sections of districts. Chief Warden is B. H. E. Goult.

U.S. Korean Losses 35% of All Casualties

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18 (AP)—The United States is estimated to have borne about 35 per cent of the battle casualty load in Korea while supplying nearly half the United Nations combat manpower engaged in the conflict.

South Korea has suffered the heaviest losses, an estimated 61½ per cent. The other 15 U.N. countries have borne the remaining 3½ per cent.

No precise comparison between American and other United Nations figures of killed, wounded and missing can be made for a given date.

The official U.S. casualty total last week stood at 121,154. The last tabulation made from United Nations and foreign sources, Aug. 30, placed the total for all other U.N. forces at 221,876, of which all but 10,899 were South Koreans.

The war-torn Republic of Korea is unsure of the exact extent of its manpower loss. In the early, desperate months of the war the South Korean army lost and picked up men with more rapidity than its harried administration could keep track of.

WHAT'S YOUR OPINION?

Do you think there should be a federal by-election right away to fill the seat left open through R. W. Mayhew's appointment as ambassador to Japan?

Mrs. R. Weatherill, representative of Harry Smith (Wholesale Toys) Ltd., Empress Hotel: "I think we should have an election now. Why wait? I think now is a good time to have it. I feel Victoria is too big and too important a city to be without representation in the federal government."

Mrs. Iona MacMillan, partner in Bond's Bar-B-Q, 1020 Bewdley: "Is it worth it? I'd like to know when the next general election is going to be. If it's not far away, it might not be worth the expense to have a by-election right away. If it's not going to be for some time, we should have an election now so we'll have a representative."

B. C. Peetz, president of Peetz & Son, 882 Island Road — "Absolutely. We have to be represented. We need someone to work for us. Not that it matters very much. But still, we might as well have it. It could be a long time before there's a general election."

Miss Florence Wilson, proprietor English Needlework Shop, 1461 May Street —"I think they should have an election so that Victoria can be represented in Ottawa. Victoria is someimes forgotten anyway, so it's up to us to see that we are at least represented all the time. I think Mr. Mayhew has done a pretty good job."

Mrs. D. Cairns, owner, Universal Sheet Metal, 2953 Foul Bay Road — "I think we should have an election as soon as possible. If we wait until a general election, something important is liable to pop up and we won't have anyone to represent us. I don't believe in having empty seats in our parliament."

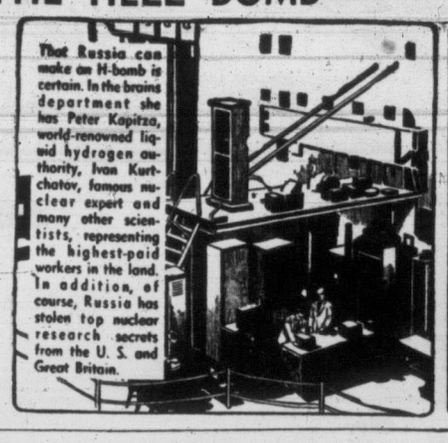
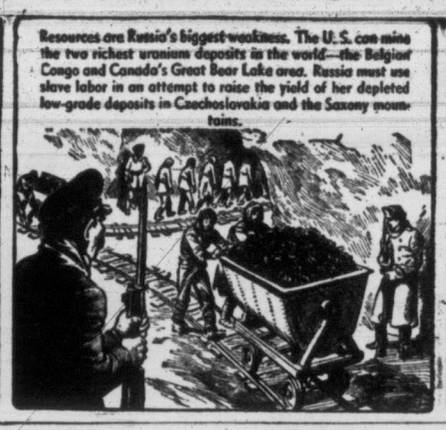
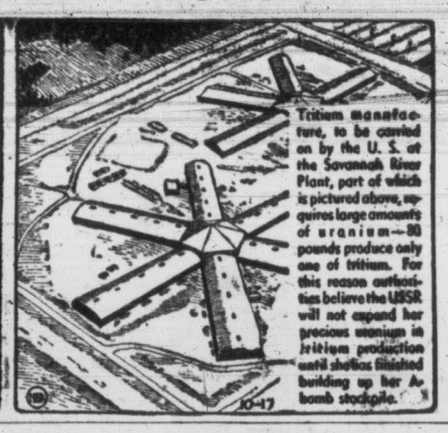
THE HELL BOMB — A TIMES FEATURE — INSTALMENT 11



That Russia can make an H-bomb is certain. In the brains department she has Peter Kapitza, world-renowned liquid hydrogen authority, Ivan Kurtchatov, famous nuclear expert and many other scientists, representing the highest-paid workers in the land. In addition, of course, Russia has stolen top nuclear research secrets from the U. S. and Great Britain.



Resources are Russia's biggest weakness. The U. S. can mine the two richest uranium deposits in the world—the Belgian Congo and Canada's Great Bear Lake area. Russia must use slave labor in an attempt to raise the yield of her depleted low-grade deposits in Czechoslovakia and the Saxony mountains.



Tritium manufacture, to be carried on by the U. S. at the Savannah River Plant, part of which is pictured above, requires large amounts of uranium—80 pounds produce only one of tritium. For this reason authorities believe the USSR will not expand her precious uranium in tritium production until she has finished building up her A-bomb stockpile.

Canada Not Urging Truce

South Africa Expected to Walk Out of U.N. Over Racial Debate

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., Oct. 18 (CP)—Canada Friday planned to urge the United Nations Assembly to appeal for Communist acceptance of a truce in Korea but decided not to after Poland called for a cease-fire in terms already rejected by the U.N.

In the prepared text of a speech in the assembly's general debate, Health Minister Paul Martin asked the U.N. to make a "solemn" appeal to the Chinese Communists and North Koreans to accept the truce. But in his speech as delivered, Martin did not include the paragraph referring to the appeal, which read:

"Let us again make a solemn appeal and with it let us hope that by consent there will in the interim be a minimum of fighting and a maximum of restraint in the propaganda war across the battleline, so that no incident or insult will impinge on the sober consideration we expect our appeal for peace will be given."

Canadian delegation sources said it was believed it would be useless to be specific about an appeal to the Communists after Polish delegate Stanislaw Skrzeszewski indicated Communist rejection of the latest U.N. peace proposals.

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., Oct. 18 (CP)—South Africa will probably walk out of the United Nations Assembly as a result of the assembly's decision to discuss the racial conflict in South Africa, informed sources said today.

South African delegate G. P. Jooste is expected to receive instructions today from Prime Minister Daniel Malan and will make his position known when the question comes before the assembly's political committee next week.

The assembly decided Friday, by a vote of 45 to 6 with eight countries including Canada abstaining, to examine the charge by Asian-Arab countries that Malan's racial policies threaten international peace and violate human rights. Malan warned recently that South Africa would quit the U.N. if it continued "interference" in South Africa's domestic affairs.

In a procedural wrangle Friday before the final vote on the South African question, a ruling by Assembly President L. B. Pearson, Canada's external affairs minister, was overturned by the assembly which voted 43 to 10 against Pearson's decision, with seven countries abstaining. It was the first such reversal of a presidential ruling on a major issue in U.N. history.

The vote against Pearson was on his ruling that the assembly should decide immediately on Jooste's demand that the assembly declare itself not competent to deal with the racial question. Several delegates, including Foreign Minister Andrei Vishinsky of Russia, claimed that Pearson had no right to put such a question before the subject was fully discussed.

Informed sources said today that Pearson had been advised by U.N. legal experts that he had a perfect right to put the question to the assembly in the manner which he did. He also had advice from Canadian advisers that he would be on shaky ground in such a move.

Woman Denies Douks Set Her House Ablaze

Mrs. Daisy Priestman today declared that her home at Hilliers, razed by fire this week, was not destroyed by Doukhobors.

"My home was burned by hoodlums," she said.

A quaker, Mrs. Priestman has been working in conjunction with the Doukhobors, whose colony is about a mile from her home. She was absent when the house was burned.

Arson has not been definitely established, according to the R.C.M.P.

A spokesman for the sect said that newcomers to the colony have not caused any trouble. They fled from the Grand Forks area to escape terrorism, and were mostly widows, children and elderly people unable to take care of themselves who had been invited to the Hilliers settlement.

According to reports, Doukhobors in the Kootenays who have been sending their children to school have been terrorized and their homes invaded.

The Hilliers burning came on the heels of the reports of activity by the radical Sons of Freedom in the interior, and occurred shortly after the arrival of the 50 newcomers to the Vancouver Island colony.

NEW MURDERS WERE FEARED

Missing Men, Youngster Turn Up in California

CHESTER, Calif., Oct. 18 (AP). A 200-man posse was dismissed early today after two men and a little girl who had been missing since Friday night turned up safely northwest of here. Sheriff's officers had feared a repetition of the robbery-massacre of a grocer and three children a week ago.

Grim-faced, armed lumbermen had massed swiftly to scour the rugged country where only a week ago the beaten bodies of grocer Guard Young and three small children were found stuffed into an auto trunk.

However, shortly before 5 a.m., the sheriff's office got a report that the three missing persons were found.

Deputies said the three were safe. There was no immediate explanation for their failure to return from a movie in nearby Westwood Friday night.

Members of this community, shocked by last week's quadruple slaying, hurriedly assembled with word that Carol Jean Hawkins, two, her millworker father, Leonard Hawkins, about 36, and Don McLaughlin, 19, his brother-in-law, were missing. All were of Chester.

Oldest college at Cambridge University is Peterhouse, established in 1284.

Egypt Denies Will Abolish Her Monarchy

CAIRO, Oct. 18 (CP)—Fathy Radwan, minister of state, today denied rumors that Egypt is about to abolish the monarchy and proclaim a republic.

"I assert on behalf of the government that rumors concerning the establishment of a republic in Egypt are absolutely and utterly wrong," he said.

The rumors cropped up this week following the change of the regency council from a three-man job to a one-man post, held by Prince Abdel Moneim, cousin of former King Farouk.

Prince Abdel Moneim's appointment also led to speculation that Farouk's dynasty would be cut off, with the prince being named King of Egypt. But Radwan said that report "also is untrue."

Gen. Mohammed Naguib, Egypt's strong man and premier, has promised that the country's present form of government—constitutional monarchy—will be maintained.

When the minister of state was asked whether Farouk will be brought to trial, he replied, "This question is in the hands of the judicial authorities, who have not yet completed their investigations."

British Columbia's two new federal cabinet members, James Sinclair and Ralph Campney, have received congratulations from the Campbell River Liberal Association.

Mr. Sinclair is new minister of fisheries and Mr. Campney is solicitor-general.

Liberals of the Comox-Alberni federal riding will meet in Parksville Nov. 29 to elect officers.

Canadian Woman on Stand in Murder Trial

State Charges Hamilton Secretary as One For Whom Baltimore Man Killed His Wife

BALTIMORE, Oct. 18 (AP)—A 28-year-old Canadian secretary, for whose love the state contends George Edward Grammer caused his wife's death, was expected to face him from the witness stand today.

She is Mathila Mizibrocky, an employee at United Nations headquarters in New York when the two met last November. Her family lives in Hamilton, Ont.

The state charges that Grammer beat his wife to death the night of Aug. 19 so that he could marry Miss Mizibrocky.

State's Attorney Anselm Sodaro told the court Tuesday Miss Mizibrocky would testify that she and Grammer lived "as man and wife" for 10 days last July and that she had gone to Canada to get parental permission to marry him despite religious differences.

In a signed statement, admitted as evidence late Friday, Grammer said he and his wife had "stopped at a little place . . . and she had maybe two drinks . . . and I guess I had five or six. . ." Later, his statement continued, he struck his 33-year-old wife, Dorothy May, on the head with a piece of pipe when she commented he apparently thought more of his work than of her.

He said when his wife made the remark, he stopped the car in which they were riding, got out, picked up a piece of pipe lying beside the road and hit her.

He said he could have hit her several times, but he didn't remember it.

Mrs. Grammer was found dead from deep head wounds in her car after it sped down a street in north Baltimore, narrowly missed a police cruiser and overturned.

A pebble was found jammed under the base of the accelerator, holding down the gas pedal.

Grammer said in one of the four statements admitted as evidence that he "could have" placed the pebble under the accelerator, but he didn't remember whether he did.

U.S. Troops Break Last Red Foothold on Triangle Hill

SEOUL, Oct. 18 (AP).—United States troops broke the last Chinese Communist foothold on Triangle Hill today in vicious, see-saw fighting on the central Korean front.

Two miles to the east, South Korean soldiers fought off three Chinese attacks on Sniper Ridge.

All day Saturday, Allied artillery hurled thunderous barrages at Red positions north of Triangle and Sniper. Allied planes roared down on Papa-San Mountain, dumping high explosives and flaming gasoline on the massive hill which the Reds use as a massing point for their assaults on Triangle and Sniper.

Five days ago the Americans and South Koreans launched the biggest Allied attack of 1952, with the goal of winning and holding these two hill masses north of Kumhwa.

Eight B-29 Superforts ran into heavy flak and rocket barrages and fought off at least seven Red night fighters early Saturday in a bombing attack on a Red army headquarters at Tosong, in northwest Korea. All eight planes returned to their base on Okinawa.

AP Correspondent Mil Farneti reported that U.S. 7th Division troops stormed to the top of Pike's Peak, at the northwest corner of Triangle Hill, just after daybreak.

Intense Red mortar and artillery fire forced them to fall back several hours later, Farneti said, but the Americans counterattacked and recaptured the crest.

Down in the Gutter

THE AMERICAN PRESIDENTIAL campaign has not turned out according to plan. From the high plane on which it began it has sunk to the gutter.

President Truman blaming General Eisenhower for misjudging the Russians, though no one more completely misjudged them than Mr. Truman himself; General Eisenhower endorsing Senator McCarthy and embracing Senator Taft whose views on foreign policy are completely opposed to his own; Governor Stevenson still refusing to play this kind of politics but perhaps hoping to benefit from the reckless whistle-stop mud slinging of the President—all this a spectacle disturbing to distant foreigners. In Canada, however, we are close enough to the United States to know that it is mostly spectacle, a temporary aberration. As soon as the polls close the American people will settle down to normal.

The important fact of the campaign is not what has happened but what has not happened. Up to now anyway there has been no real breach between the two major parties on foreign policy.

General Eisenhower has attacked (quite unfairly in some particulars) the government's execution of foreign policy. He has not attacked the essentials of the policy itself. In the old isolationist stronghold of the Middle West he has declared repeatedly that isolationism is dead forever. He insists that the safety of Europe is vital to the safety of the United States. He has rejected out of hand the MacArthur theory of expanding the Korean war into an attack on China which might well produce a general Asiatic war, perhaps a world war.

In every basic respect he endorses the government's foreign policy while belaboring it for bungling in execution. The general has been obviously confused in domestic issues, he has made promises of economy which he cannot hope to implement, he has denounced the high cost of living and endorsed huge government subsidies to keep food prices up, but he has not changed his views on foreign policy even while welcoming men like Senator Taft who disagree with him.

So far as the Presidency is concerned, therefore, American policy towards the world should not be basically altered however the election turns out.

But it must never be forgotten that foreign policy is not made exclusively in the White House. No President can enforce any great policy without the support of Congress, which makes all laws and votes all appropriations.

How will the next Congress behave in foreign affairs? That is the great imponderable of the election. Can a Republican Congress be trusted to maintain the present foreign policy—a Congress dominated by the Tafts and the McCarthys?

Thirty-two years ago, in the tragic election of 1920, the most respected Republicans of the nation, all internationalists, signed a famous round-robin assuring the public that Warren Harding, if elected, would save the League of Nations. Mr. Harding and the Congress elected with him proceeded to kill the League of Nations.

Governor Stevenson asks today whether the Republicans can be trusted to support General Eisenhower's foreign policy once they have won the election. Millions of Americans and a large part of the free world must be pondering that question.

A Barrier Before the Bar

THE CANADIAN BAR ASSOCIation, which now has a special committee studying fees charged by provinces to lawyers from other parts of the country who wish to practice outside their own provinces, will doubtless be impressed by the recommendations of the Law Society of Upper Canada.

Briefly, the society suggests that excessive fees be reduced in such cases provided candidates prove their qualifications.

The Diefenbaker instance, in which the distinguished lawyer was required to pay a call fee of $1,500 before he could appear in a British Columbia court, was mentioned.

Such action is not peculiar to British Columbia. Similar instances might be cited in other provinces—though in relatively few would the charge be so high. Moreover, barristers here note, newcomers from other parts of Canada may avoid the high fee by articling in B.C. for a year and then paying only the ordinary charge for call.

The high fee, it is explained, was introduced during war years when many local young men in the profession, or entering it, left civilian occupations for the forces. The substantial amount was intended to discourage an influx of outsiders who would usurp their opportunities while they were absent. If there was justification in that argument, it has lapsed now. The war has been over seven years. Those whom the high fee might have protected have had time to rehabilitate themselves.

The fee, nevertheless, remains. It sets up an economic barrier between one province and another as far as the profession is concerned.

True, it can be avoided, by putting in a year's study in British Columbia following qualification elsewhere. But what type of option is that? Surely not much better than the alternative of sentencing a man to a $10 fine or 30 days in jail.

As the call fee stands today, it is nothing short of straight discrimination against lawyers from other provinces. Moreover, it is a penalty attributable to geography and imposed not by the elected representatives of the people, but by a professional body.

As long as the high fee persists, that professional body weakens the arguments for its existence as the agency which shall decide who and under what conditions a person will pursue his chosen profession in any province.

The Law Society of Upper Canada deserves support for its recommendations.

LOOSE ENDS

We Struck Gold

By BRUCE HUTCHISON

NEARLY a hundred years ago the men and women who toiled up Governor Douglas' Cariboo Road hoped to find gold. The men would find it in the creeks, the women in the men's pockets. Most of them found little gold. Things are different today. Whoever goes to Cariboo in the autumn is certain to find gold.

Across our high inland plateau and to the outer rim of the Rockies the gold of autumn poplar flows in wild torrent, and everywhere, upon the floor of the forest, is minted in the round coin of falling leaves. The air around you is thick with floating gold dust and laced with the sage and pine spices of the uplands.

Hutchison

A coastal dweller, used to the sober coloring and discreet odors of the maritime rain forest, becomes dazzled and dizzy in the face of these reeling hues, he is soon a little drunk on the potent wine of mountain air.

JUST the same, for all its autumn glory, the Cariboo, I am bound to report, is not what it used to be. I cannot quite speak as a survivor of the gold rush, which occurred in the sixties. At that time, indeed, I had only begun my apprenticeship in the newspaper business and was still a young man. But I can remember the Cariboo when it still lived, with little change, in the fashion of the gold rush.

More than 30 years ago, when I first rode into the Cariboo on horse back (after descending the Fraser from Prince George by boat) some of the survivors of the rush were still there. A lonely lamp shining through the darkness of Lightning Creek, led me, one cold, wet November night, to the cabin of Harry Jones, who panned that shimmering gravel in 1862, and told me, from first-hand recollection, the great epic of British Columbia. Harry Jones and the rest are gone and much else has gone with them.

THE CARIBOO ROAD itself is gone, or most of it. Until Mr. Ernest Carson (whose father was in the gold rush) began to give British Columbia a modern highway system, the Cariboo Road, slightly improved, followed the winding trail laid out by Douglas. It was tortuous, often steep and unbelievably rough. I am bound to say I preferred it that way.

Averaging 15 or 20 miles an hour at most, one had time to see the Cariboo and the great river cutting it in two. Today the legal speed on Mr. Carson's new road is 50, and the prevailing speed 70. Driving at that pace, a man sees only the blacktop pavement stretching ahead, straight as an arrow, to the remote horizon.

THE ORIGINAL road was fastened to the sides of the Fraser Canyon with toothpicks and haywire. The second road, built in the 1920's, was a faint scratch upon those sheer rock walls. The new road is a deep gash, a riven trench through the coastal range, and it will be there for all time, man's permanent mark upon the geography of a continent.

Long hence, when this temporary phase which we call modern civilization has disappeared, some new breed of men will stumble upon these strange burrowings and they will know that other men were here before them and left a brief memorial in their passage.

THE OLD road is gone and with it a unique manner of life. Among other changes for the worse, as any old-timer will agree, women in the Cariboo are now treated as the equal with men. Incredible but true. In my time the women of the stopping houses waited on table, where only males were permitted, and ate what was left alone in the kitchen. That was the great age.

When I find a chromium restaurant in Ashcroft (the green parrot who used to blaspheme at the hotel door has disappeared), when I find Clinton dolled up like Main Street and a coffee shoppe and even, of all things, a bank standing beside the weathered barns and corrals of the Hundred Mile House, and when I listen to the thunder of freight trucks all night where the stage coaches used to make about seven miles an hour, then I have to face the fact that the Cariboo, as a separate spiritual entity, a last outpost of another century, has gone the way of most good things.

THE PHYSICAL reality remains, the broad and empty sweep of range, the great rivers ravening to the sea, the lonely, trout-dimpled lakes, the open forests of red-barked pine and everywhere the autumn torrent of gold, one treasure which man cannot despoil.

Being A Chronicle Of Our Times

MONDAY, 13th—This day being Thanksgiving Day, and also my birthday, I spent it very strictly in the city, and found much to be thankful for: good health, friends and estate. But I looked duskishly at myself in the glass, with sorrow refleckting that my life was half done, and little to show for it. By and by I sat me down, and wrote a half dozen of letters. Thinking to attend on the hockey, I put myself in a walking garb, and repaired anon with my boy to the Arena, where I discoursed with many citizens: Master Lester Patrick, Master Ed Mallek (who hath this day shot an 78 at golfe), Master George Straith, Dr. Angus Kenning, Master Hector Crombie, Master Athol McBean, and divers other blades and gallants. Now this was genial sport, and I joyed myself in the rout administered the churls from abroad. So home for a large turkey-fowle, with sage dressing, and my children danced to Prokofief's "Cinderella," which hath come to them on disques. My wife, poor wretch, having staid all this day by the oven, I took her abroad to attend a play, "Just For You," mostly nonsense, but with Mistress Jane Wyman, whom I adore. Anon, infinite full of turkey and hot aire, there comes to me a vile ake in the head, which put me mightily out of countenance.

* * *

TUESDAY, 14th — This morning, awaiting on a teacher at my girl's school, I came upon a government seal describing this place as a "welfare institution," with a foot-note that it was not for the purpose of harboring the mentally ill. Which I am grateful for. Comes to me by and by Master Hutchison and Master Fox, home from vacation and fit to burst with tidings from abroad. Anon through the streets by carriage, in the doing of which I espied Mistress Pat Sylvester, pretty in a white blouse and red skirtings. So to the hotel, where I sat me down with Master Fred McGregor, Master Tom Denny, Master John MacCormac, Master Jack McDowell, and a great concourse of gentlemen. And I listened with great content to an address by Dr. G. H. Wilson, a noble orator of 84, who spoke of his journeys abroad, in the doing of which he proferr'd this advice: "Always take twice as much money and half as many clothes as you planned," a most profound axiom for voyaging. By and by to my desk, where I spent four hours in severe travail; but anon my wife calls with news that my girl hath taken the fever. So home, and called Dr. Simpson, and he diagnosed this malady as tonsillitis. And I thank the Lord it is only this, which will pass with rest and fluids. This day I learned my friend Master James Conant was wed.

* * *

WEDNESDAY, 15th — This morning at 6.30 I was awakened by a call from Senator Stanley McKeen, he much a-stir about news impending from Ottawa: which I learned betimes was the appointment as ambassador of Sir Robert Mayhew, which joyed me to the marrow. Whereupon I haled the telegraph, and requested a scribe to "wire fully"; but this remark much stumbled the operator, who asked: "Wire who?" So I cursed this rogue and returned to my bed. Up betimes, and into my finest camellot coate, in order to attend on the Governor-General, in the doing of which I came upon a great press of persons: Dr. and Mistress Sam Janowsky, he busily snapping picktures of this event; Master and Mistress Logan Mayhew, delighted with this day's honor to their family, and telling me in my eare that the best play they'd seen abroad was "The King and I"; Major Cuthbert Holmes, whose boy is the godson of Master Massey; and many more. And Mistress Gwen Scott chivved me about my waistline, promising me an exercise I could do while standing still, which ingenious remedy I await with interest. By and by to the counting-house, and to lunch with Dr. Alec Gunning, and we discoursed of my boy's teeth. Up betimes, and away to CJVI, where I sat me down with Master Ted Reynolds, and made noises into a box, for transmission abroad. Comes to me at my place of business Master William Wilson, whom I'd last seen in a Soho restaurant, in the raiment of a journalist of the warres, and we were mighty civilly merry together. So away to the hotel, to discourse awhile with Dr. Norman MacKenzie, in the doing of which he made this sage observation, to wit: that the world would be easy to administer, were it not for the people in it. Anon home, where my girl repairs, and she demanded of me a glass of ginger-ale. Thence aloft, to read with pride fit to burst an artickle entitled "The New Canada"; and so by coach away into the night, to discourse with the University Women's Club, in the doing of which I chatted with Mistress Alan Harris, Mistress Sydney Craig, Mistress Harold Turner, and many more excellent ladies. Thus away home after 17 hours of affairs, mighty confused and weary.

* * *

THURSDAY, 17th—At lunch this day I sat me down with Capt. Ronald Newell and listened to a noble address on the state of our fishes by Master Jackson, he summoned to this task within 24 hours of canoeing down the Nechako River. And this proved quiet, authoritative stuff on the strange ways of salmon, who have regulated the economy on our watersheds for 130 years. Thus through the streets to purchase divers knick-knacks: a bottle of spirits for an overworked friend; some shirtings, from Master Les Davies; some tickets for the Rotary vaudeville show. By and by to my books and papers, to sift the present posture of our affairs, and at it close all the afternoon. This night by coach to Victoria College, to discourse of education with Mistress Harry Smith and many fine gallants; but we were at no great frays together, and debated with studied politeness, which ill becomes the exploration of new ideas. Anon I chatted with Mr. Justice Joseph Clearihue, our new jurist, and found him to be the host this night of Master Fred G. C. Wood, a sparkling educator from abroad. So by coach with Master Frederick Kreigel, the pianist and scholar, away; and wearily home, to tether my dog. In the journals this day was an excellent cartoon by Master Harold Tucker Webster, who makes citizens laugh fit to burst, even after his hand is stilled.

* * *

FRIDAY, 17th—This day and night I sat me down with a great confluence of wits and rogues, attending on a convention in this city: Masters Richard Pullen, Robert Drummond-Hay, Peard Sutherland (the pickture-drawer), Ernest Arnott, Morley Collins, Harold Merilees, Earl Cameron, William Herbert, Ted Fox, Leslie Way, Cecil Hacker, Leslie Barbour, Lewis Griffith, Victor Ball, Cameron Hooper, Irving Wilson, Arvid Lundell, Hal Malone, Harold Foley, David Willock (who once rolled dice with Farouk), Richard McHugh, Alan Alsgard, Joseph Foley, Richard McLean, Edgar Dunning, Roy Foote, Jas. K. Nesbitt, Aubrey Roberts; and one or two more. At supper Mistress Bennett told me in my eare she and the Premier move to their rooms by the sea anon, and mighty pleased with the prospect of ocean, islands and mountains. The frosts and dews come on my carriage these nights.

'Fit the Crime'

London Free Press

Judge E. A. Shaunessy sitting in court at Sarnia warned motorists of heavier penalties to come, and in some cases of jail terms instead of fines. "When incomes were much lower," he said, "a small fine acted as a deterrent. But today a small fine means nothing to most people. To some people even a large fine means nothing. They pay, and go merrily along their reckless way. I suggest we should have jail terms for such people."

Motorists in general may not see eye-to-eye with Judge Shaunessy, but no one can deny that motor crashes are on the increase, that existing penalties fail to prevent reckless driving or to deter the offender. Judge Shaunessy wants a punishment "to fit the crime," which must certainly be something radically different from what is being done now.

Coho Salmon Run the Gauntlet's Hazards In Negotiating 'The Long Voyage Home'

By DR. G. CLIFFORD CARL, Director, Provincial Museum.

TOWARD the end of "Indian summer" the stragglers of the migrating coho salmon make their way around the southern tip of Vancouver Island on the last lap of their journey before entering fresh water. Off the west coasts of the Queen Charlotte Islands, and later, on the feeding grounds west of Vancouver Island, they have gorged themselves repeatedly on sandlance, young herring, pilchard, "redfeed" and young swimming crabs, picking up whatever is available at the time. Since spring when they were in the "blueblack" stage they have grown enormously, doubling and trebling their weight.

Carl

Now the bodies of the females are well rounded with maturing eggs and the snouts of the males are developing the hook characteristic of their kind. The muscle tissues and other organs of both sexes are well stocked with oil to act as a food store during the coming fast in fresh water. They are in the "pink" of condition, as they must be, for the final phase of their life.

Instead of following along the southern shoreline of the Straits and then swinging northward through the San Juan Islands as do the Fraser River salmon these late arrivals stick to the Vancouver Island side for they are bound for the Cowichan River. On each ebbing tide they pick up the smell of their home stream.

With each tail thrust the body of the fish is driven forward and a tiny flow of water is directed in and out of the nasal pit by a skin flap projecting from each nostril. No matter that the waters of the Cowichan are diluted almost to infinity by mixing with the sea water of the Gulf the salmon's super-keen nostril can detect its presence and can use it as a guide in its travels.

Though it is almost three years since these fish have left their natal stream the particular odor (or taste) of their home water stirs some dim memory in the inner recesses of their nervous system and causes the fish to return no matter what obstacles are in their path.

Some of the late-comers swing shoreward after passing Sheringham Point and those which come into the shallower water soon discover that their way is barred by a strange structure. They will mill around for a short time then begin to move along the barricade until they find themselves within an enclosure with other fishes not all of their own kind.

They continue to move around restlessly; those which do not find the original opening by which they entered eventually join others in the inner enclosure of the trap from which they are finally dipped to be taken to the cannery.

By the next tide the cohoes which have avoided capture in the traps begin to pass the headlands of the southern tip of the Island. They linger in the area for several days working along the great kelp beds or resting in the back eddies produced by outcroppings of rock.

From time to time they dash through schools of young herring, causing these small fish to break through the surface of the water in glinting points of light. Each time this occurs terns and short-billed gulls quickly gather and begin diving into the school of skittering fish.

The herring, harassed from below and above, break into small scattered groups which reunite as soon as the pursuers lose contact. The salmon, gorged for the present, roll lazily at the surface or lie in quiet waters, fanning the pectoral fins just sufficiently to maintain their position.

So long as seals and killer whales do not make an appearance the migrating fish are content to pause until the next change of tide brings them once again the taste of home waters.

The Jury Show: Whys and Wherefores

BY COLIN GRAHAM, Curator, Arts Centre

AN ART JURY, according to the classic definition, is a small group of people condemned in advance. History has yet to record a jury that satisfied everyone.

This being so, it is something of a mystery how people can still be found to accept jury responsibilities. One can only assume that either they are endowed with outsize martyr complexes or, failing that, must be lacking an adequate sense of self-preservation.

The most sensible procedure for an art gallery to follow in having its local shows judged is fundamentally a very simple one. Jurors are called in from the most distant possible places; they are advised candidly as to local lynching practices; and when the judging has been done, are provided with seats on the next fast plane out of town.

The trouble is that this all takes money. What, then, should a gallery like the Arts Centre do that is operating on an austerity budget and knows it cannot afford such a luxurious arrangement?

A certain income is derived, it is true, from the fees of those entering paintings; but this is counterbalanced by the expense of the show. Common courtesy demands, for example, that accepted works shipped in be returned after the show express prepaid.

The gallery must therefore find a jury unwise enough not only to serve, but to serve without fee.

In the case of the present jury show the Centre was lucky in obtaining the services of a gallant Vancouver artist more interested in helping the cause of painting in B.C. than in furthering personal ends. But since he could hardly be expected to shoulder the responsibility alone, the two further jurors were impressed from the ranks of the gallery directorate.

It is a serious and solemn matter to reject the work of a painter who has struggled long and hard and done the best of which he is capable. No juror with elementary humanity feels anything but discomfort with this part of the business.

But it is a still more serious matter to reject a picture because of prejudice on the part of the juror regarding painting style.

To offset this possibility the gallery, as is often done elsewhere, so selected the jurors that one represented the traditional and conservative outlook, another the middle-of-the-road viewpoint, and the third the modern or radical approach. A fairer system has probably yet to be devised.

Traditional practice was further observed in that the convener of the gallery exhibition committee was called on to be one of the jurors. This is usually done when out-of-town jurors are not available.

Criticism has recently been expressed in the press because two paintings by one of the jurors were hung. It was intimated, with questionable taste, that this might have been due to the favored position of the juror in question.

For two reasons that notion is as unfortunate as it is misinformed. Firstly, that particular juror has always avoided putting her own work forward as much as she has been entitled to while selflessly serving the Arts Centre cause for many years; and secondly, it is the accepted custom both here and in Europe that jurors, if they are local artists, are invited to contribute two of their own works jury free. It is also customary for the exhibition committee, of which this juror is convener, to hang the accepted works.

It is done in Vancouver, in Toronto, in London, in New York, in San Francisco, and will doubtless be done in Timbuctoo when that estimable village attains the dignity of an art gallery.

What, finally, is a jury show? It is an exhibition in which the works submitted are screened by a professional jury whose aim is to pick from these submissions a show of the highest possible standards. It is quite distinct from a non-jury show in which, because there is no jury, each artist submitting works automaticallly has them hung.

THE CAINE MUTINY

77 Weeks a Bestseller

"Well," said Keggs mournfully, "looks like we're roommates."

"This is it," said Willie.

A heap of books entered the door, walking on stout legs. "Make way, gentlemen, heah Ah come," spoke a muffled voice. The books fell and bounced all over the remaining cot, unveiling a tall, fat sailor with a cheery flushed face, small crinkling eyes and a very large loose mouth. "Well, fellas, looks like we're in for a lot of Shinola, don't it?" he said, in a high, musical Southern cadence. "Ah'm Keefer."

"I'm Keith."

"Keggs."

The fat Southerner shoved a number of his books off the cot to the floor, and stretched himself out on the springs. "Ah had me a farewell party last night," he groaned, inserting a happy giggle into the groan, "to end all farewell parties. Why do we do it to ourselves, fellas? 'Scuse me." He rolled his face to the wall.

"You're not going to sleep!" Keggs said. "Suppose they catch you?"

"My boy," said Keefer drowsily, "Ah am an old military man. Four years at Gaylord Academy. Don' worry about ol' Keefer. Punch me if Ah snore." Within a minute he was sleeping like a hog in the sun.

"He'll get bilged, sure," mourned Keggs, turning the pages of Naval Ordnance. "So will I. This book is absolute gibberish to me. What on earth is a cam? What do they mean by an interrupted screw?"

"Search me. What do you mean, 'bilged'?"

"Don't you know how they work it? We get three weeks as apprentice seamen. Then the top two thirds of the class become midshipmen. The rest get bilged. Straight to the Army."

The fugitives exchanged an understanding look. Willie's hand crept around to his back, to ascertain how hollow his hollow back really was. He began a series of frenzied efforts to touch his toes. At every bend he came nearer. He broke out in a sweat. Once he thought the tips of his fingers brushed his shoelaces, and he gurgled in triumph. With a swoop and a groan, his spine vibrating, the room spinning, he found that Keefer, rolled over and awake, was staring at him with frightened little eyes. Keggs had backed into a corner. Willie attempted a light-hearted laugh, but he staggered at the same moment and had to clutch the desk to keep from falling over, so the effect of nonchalance was marred. "Nothing like a little setting-up exercise," he said, with drunken savoir-faire.

"Hell, no," said Keefer. "Especially three o'clock in the afternoon. Ah never miss it myself."

Three rolled-up mattresses came catapulting through the open door.

The rest of the day went by in bugles, assemblies, dismissals, reassemblies, announcements, marches, lectures, and aptitude tests. Every time the administration remembered a detail that had been omitted in the mimeographed sheets the bugle blared, and five hundred sailors swarmed out of Furnald Hall.

When the bugle sounded retreat and Willie climbed into bed, it occurred to him that he had not had a single thought of May Wynn or of his parents all day.

There had been some talk of Willie's returning to Princeton after graduation for a master's degree in literature, the first step toward a teaching career. But in September following a summer of tennis and multiple romances at his grandparents' home in Rhode Island, Willie had found a job in a cocktail lounge of a minor New York hotel, playing the piano and singing his original ditties.

His songs were of the order known as cute, rather than witty or tuneful. His major piece, sung only for the larger crowds, was "If You Knew What the Gnu Knew," a comparison of the love-making ways of animals and humans. The rest of his works leaned heavily on such devices as rhyming "plastered" and "bastard," and "twitches" and "bitches"—but instead of saying the off-color word, Willie would smile at his audience and substitute a harmless one that didn't rhyme. This usually provoked happy squeals from the kind of audiences that collected in the cocktail lounge. Willie's close-trimmed Princetonian haircut, his expensive clothes, and his childlike sweetness of face served to dress up his slender talent.

A couple of months later the proprietor of a very dingy night club on Fifty-second Street, the Club Tahiti, saw his act and bought him away from the hotel with a raise of ten dollars a week. This transaction was concluded in an afternoon interview at the Club Tahiti, a dank cellar full of papier-mache palms, dusty coconuts, and upended chairs on tables. The date was December 7, 1941.

Willie emerged from this meeting into the sunny street full of exultation and pride. He had risen above the minimum union wage. It seemed to him that he had overtaken Cole Porter, and was well on the way to nosing out Noel Coward. The street, with its garish, weather-beaten night-club signs, its magnified photographs of nobodies like himself, looked beautiful to him. He stopped at a newsstand, his eye attracted by unusually big and black headlines: JAPS BOMB PEARL HARBOR. He did not know where Pearl Harbor was; in a passing thought he placed it on the Pacific side of the Panama Canal. He realized that this meant the United States would enter the war, but the turn of events seemed in no way comparable in importance to his engagement at the Club Tahiti. A very high draft number, in those days, helped a man to keep calm about the war.

So it was that Willie Keith sang and played for the customers of the Club Tahiti from December, 1941, to April, 1942, while the Japanese conquered the Philippines, and the Prince of Wales and the Repulse sank, and Singapore fell, and the cremation ovens of the Germans consumed men, women, and children at full blast, thousands every day.

In the spring two great events occurred in Willie's life; he fell in love, and he received a notice from his draft board.

THE CHURCH PAGE

By LANCE H. WHITTAKER

Anniversaries of any description are always a legitimate cause for nostalgic remembrance, but the habit of marking the passing years in a church congregation must surely mean an ultimate in poignancy for those whose lives have been bound up in the "fellowship of Christian minds."

All the great moments of life—christening, confirmation, marriage and death—are accomplished by and through the church, and in company with those who share joy or sorrow at those times.

Whittaker

What memories must be recalled by those whom the years have touched with gray!

Tomorrow, at James Bay, a company of people who are part of a church which has served human need for 60 years will go back in memory to the beginning.

No small part of their pride in the continuance of the James Bay ministry can be attributed to the fact that their church was first of all a vision by a group of young people.

Out of the old Pandora Street Methodist Church in 1891 a group of students undertook a mission to the south part of the city which culminated, within a year, in a new church congregation.

The primary need and the first concern of the mission was a Sunday school—and the children led their elders to inaugurating regular worship services.

The congregation met at first in the old Kingston Street school, but on Aug. 28, 1892, a proud group opened and dedicated the church building at the corner of Michigan and Menzies Streets.

Pioneer Names on James Bay Rolls

Some pioneer names are inscribed on the rolls of that first congregation, names like Tufts, Spencer, Winkle, Emery, Lorimer, Davies, Schroeder and many others.

Men who played a big role in the early difficult years included George Powell, the Government Street merchant, customs man F. W. Davey, and Queen's Printer Robert Butler. The late Justin Gilbert served the church for many years in the service of praise. Only a year ago his memory was honored in the dedication of a new electric organ secured by the efforts of Mrs. F. J. Schroeder.

The congregation has been fortunate in the ministry of some of the finest men in the church. The first pastor was the Rev. S. Wilkinson, who had been assistant to Rev. Coverdale Watson at the Pandora Street church. Dedication services were conducted by Rev. Ebenezer Robson, beloved divine of the early Methodist church.

Since then many fine ministers have brought the church down through the years to the present ministry of Rev. S. V. H. Redman.

One of them, Rev. George Kinney, will revisit his favorite department of the church, the Sunday school, tomorrow morning.

Mr. Kinney, whose fame as a worker among young peple is still legend throughout British Columbia, exemplifies the work and spirit of James Bay United Church.

For Mr. Redman and his people we could not wish any finer consummation of their labors than that the church go forward in the days to come wrapped in the warmth of fellowship which is the inheritance of 60 years in His service.

Y.M.C.A.'s Card Sellers Compete for Holiday

Clayton Cameron, Y.M.C.A. boys' work secretary, announced today the annual sale of Christmas cards to raise funds for "Y" world service work will continue to Dec. 15. Top salesman at the end of the campaign will be given a two weeks' vacation at Thunderbird Camp next summer. Second highest seller will receive one free wee kat the camp.

The Odeon Theatre has offered prizes too.

Of the $600 raised by the boys' department last year for world service work, the major proportion came from the sales of these cards.

Victoria Undergrad to Guide U.B.C. Publicity

Victoria student Ken O'Shea, in his second year at U.B.C., has been chosen to head the publicity committee for the 30th anniversary of homecoming events at the university.

The week Oct. 27 to Nov. 1 has been set aside as homecoming week, during which the grads and general public will be treated to a variety of events, including a parade through Vancouver, football game, the homecoming ball and the crowning of the homecoming princess.

NEWS OF CITY CHURCHES

Metropolitan Hall To Be Opened At Church Dinner on Wednesday

Dr. A. E. Whitehouse will participate Wednesday at 6.30 in the culmination of a project that was started under his aegis as minister of the Metropolitan United Church.

At a congregational dinner to which representatives of city clergy of all denominations and Mayor Claude Harrison have been invited, Dr. Whitehouse will preside at the formal opening and dedication of the Metropolitan Hall.

An addition to the church, the hall cost $100,000.

The services at St. Andrew's Presbyterian on Sunday will be conducted by the minister, Rev. J. L. W. McLean, M.A., D.D.

The morning sermon subject will be "On Being a Jonah," and in the evening "No More Prayer"—the third in a series on "Our Way of Life." The Sacrament of Infant Baptism will be dispensed.

The senior departments of the Sunday school meets at 9.45 a.m. and the beginners and primary at 11, during Morning Worship.

* * *

The regular weekly service at Langford United Church will be held at 11 a.m. in Belmont junior high school. Sunday school will convene at the same hour.

* * *

At Emmanuel Baptist Church Sunday the pastor, Rev. James E. Smith, will conduct both services, speaking in the morning on the subject "Is Grief Blessed?" and in the evening "The Devil's House Being Whitewashed."

Wise Men Ensure World's Future Victoria College Grads Reminded

BY DINAH KERR
Times College Reporter

In a ceremony Friday evening which concluded a week of formalities at Victoria College, marking the 50th anniversary, scholarships and prizes were presented to outstanding students of the previous term.

Judge J. B. Clearihue, chairman of the Victoria College Council, in his opening remarks urged support of the library donation fund. Commenting on the enforced absence of some students due to fog grounding planes in Vancouver, he recommended the problem of Vancouver's weather to the college physics department.

"More and more wise men ensure the well-being of the world," was the theme of an address given by Dr. W. Harry Hickman, principal. "The motto on the 1904 Coat of Arms of the college, 'Let There Be Light,' is still essential today," he said, drawing a laugh from the crowd as he added: "A liberal education can be maintained under a Social Credit regime."

The main speaker, Brigadier Sherwood Lett, a member of the first graduating class of U.B.C., is the first college alumnus to become chancellor of that university. The topic of his speech was "The Next Fifty Years." Brigadier Lett stressed that the "most important potential resources in British Columbia are its manpower and brainpower" He suggested that a frequent analysis of the school system is necessary if the cultural and artistic needs of the students are to be met.

A vote of thanks to the speaker was extended by R. T. Wallace, professor of mathematics.

AWARDS LISTED

The following scholarships and prizes were awarded: Percy H. Elliott Memorial Scholarship of $130, awarded to a student of outstanding merit and promise, George H. Forbes; Royal Institution and Frank Eaton Memorial Scholarship of $50, for second year English, Beverley J. Fulton; Alliance Francaise Prize awarded for progress in second year French, E. Good Insulation Job Lasts for Lifetime

How long does mineral wool insulation last? Will it be necessary for me to re-insulate in, say, another 10 or 20 years? These are questions which quite naturally arise in the mind of the home-owner when insulating.

According to building contractors, mineral wool insulation can give life-long service, if properly installed. Cases are on record where installations of mineral wool are still operating effectively after 50 years of service.

Because it is made from inorganic materials such as rock, slag or glass, mineral wool insulation resists damage or deterioration from decay, fire, vermin and moisture. In addition, it requires no repairs or upkeep.

However, in order to ensure that the best results are obtained from insulation, it is essential that it be properly installed and in the required thickness.

While it is best to have the work done by a qualified contractor, certain forms of insulation such as mineral wool blankets and batts can be installed by the average home-owner without any trouble. In any event, the insulation should be installed with care and the manufacturer's directions should be followed.

FARM and RANCH

By HUMPHRY DAVY

About 30 tons or 60,000 pounds or rabbit meat a month are consumed by people on Vancouver Island.

These figures supplied by Bert MacDonald, 1065 Portage Road, operator of a large rabbit farm, give some indication of the growing importance of the Island's rabbit industry which has passed almost unnoticed in recent years.

Mr. MacDonald, better known as the "rabbit king" for his work in connection with rabbit breeding, predicts that rabbit meat consumption will continue to increase on the Island.

At present, he said, there are not enough rabbits on the Island to supply the demand and meat has to be imported from the Mainland.

There is much to be said in favor of rabbit meat as a food. The nutritive value of the meat is 83 per cent as compared with beef 75 per cent, pork 65 per cent and chicken 50 per cent.

Fuel value of rabbit meat varies according to age of animal, beginning from 627 to 1,011 calories per pound and averaging 855 calories per pound. Protein content of rabbit compares favorably with other meats and it is relatively low in fat content.

Rabbit meat also usually costs less per pound than the more expensive cuts of lamb and beef. It is recommended by physicians and is served in hospitals and sanitoriums all over the country because of its digestible nutrients.

The increased consumption of rabbit meat has given impetus to the Vancouver Island Rabbit Breeders' Association which recently held its annual meeting.

The association decided to institute its own rabbit registration system along the same lines as now operated in England and the United States. Under the system, any rabbit owner, whether or not he is a member of the association, may register his rabbits if he can show a three-generation pedigree and the rabbit can qualify to the standard of perfection for the particular breed.

This will do much to improve rabbit breeding on Vancouver Island.

Mrs. P. M. Baker, W. G. Bird and F. Bouch have been appointed by the association as judges and registrars. Rabbits to be registered should be brought to club meetings on the second Friday in every month at 749 Broughton Street.

A New Zealand white owned by Mrs. A. B. Merriman of Merriment Rabbitry, Langford Lake, became the second rabbit to be registered and entered in the association's stud book. Retiring secretary Henry Reimer was the first owner to have a rabbit registered.

The meeting returned Stan Hunt as president. Gordon Ash was named vice-president, and Ralph Moore, secretary.

Most rabbit breeders on the island specialize in one or two breeds. Some of these include A. J. Ingram, satins; Harry Sanders, Leigh Road, New Zealand whites and English spotted rex; Henry Reimer, Willerton Street, New Zealand whites; J. G. Bennett, angoras; Mrs. A. R. Merriman, checkered giants and ermine rex; Bob Gisborn, Ladysmith, Flemish giants.

HOME GARDEN

By JACK BEASTALL

Growing a hedge along a property line involves more than buying a few plants and setting them in a straight line. That part of the job is easy to do.

Jack

More difficult is the selection of suitable material, of which a diverse assortment is available. Possibly the most common error is to contemplate the hedge in the light of the present with no thought of the future.

The home gardener usually desires something low in price which will make an effective barrier within a year or two. The price is taken care of by purchasing small plants, and these must be of a quick-growing type if the expected results are to be obtained in the allotted time.

But plants which grow quickly do so because they have a large and vigorous root system which spreads rapidly to obtain the maximum of food. Although the desired height is soon reached, the surrounding soil for a considerable distance from the hedge is depleted. In the light of the present, the rapid growers seem ideal, but in the future the gardener may wish for slower growing plants with less pernicious roots.

With regard to hardiness, rapid growing plants produce top growth which is more tender than that produced by slow growing plants, and therefore cannot be considered as permanent. Monterey cypress hedges, for instance, suffered considerably a few winters back, but hedges of yew have withstood the elements for over 300 years in England.

Today the trend is toward a hedge which will add color to the garden at some period of the year. There are many flowering shrubs and a goodly number of plants whose foliage changes color with the seasons. These subjects should be given careful consideration before a decision is reached.

Another important point is the feelings of our neighbors and the general public. While we may feel that a hedge along our property line is most desirable, our neighbor may not enjoy either roots or top growth on his property, nor may the passerby appreciate being pushed off the sidewalk by encroaching foliage. Always plant far enough back from the line to accommodate the entire mature plant on your own land.

Dock Project Seen For Royal City

NEW WESTMINSTER, B.C., Oct. 18 (BUP) — Liberal M. P. William M. Mott of New Westminster says a joint undertaking between the New Westminster Harbor Board and the federal government will get under way "very soon" to give the Royal City a multi-milion dollar dock project.

Mott reported Friday that the development has reached the final planning stage with the federal government. It will include construction of a new dock and bunkerage along the 6,000-foot Annieville dike on the main channel of the Fraser River. Construction of the new dock area will provide accommodations for an additional 12 deep-sea vessels.

Wide Use New Type Mortgage

Wider use of the open-end mortgage to finance home modernization and repair is predicted in building circles.

The open-end, or additional advance mortgage, is one which contains a provision to permit the home owner to borrow additional funds from his lending institution for major repairs and face-lifting modernization. Open-end mortgages can be used for household appliances, and even carpeting.

Home owners can re-borrow up to the original amount of the mortgage and sometimes even more. Cash needed for improvement is added to the unpaid balance of the note. The sum advanced is paid back over the remaining life of the mortgage.

In some cases, the lender can extend the life of the mortgage. The open-end mortgage program was first advocated for home owners to borrow money to improve their properties on easier and cheaper terms.

2 Who Served In Canada Get Royal Posts

LONDON, Oct. 18 (CP)—The Queen's latest appointments to the Royal household involve two men who have served in Canada.

In an announcement from Buckingham Palace Friday night, Lord Tryon, 46, was named keeper of the privy purse and royal treasurer, succeeding Sir Ulick Alexander, 63. Lord Tryon served as aide-de-camp to the Earl of Bessborough in 1933-34, when the latter was Governor-General of Canada.

Maj. Mark Milbank, 45, becomes deputy master of the royal household, a job involving maintenance of the royal castles and palaces. Maj. Milbank was on the staff of Earl Alexander, Governor-General of Canada from 1946 to last year.

Guilty in Drug Case

VANCOUVER, Oct. 18 (BUP)—An assize court jury deliberated only 15 minutes Friday before returning a verdict of guilty in the trial of 20-year-old Robert Woods of Vancouver, charged with distributing a substance reported to be a narcotic.

He was remanded until the end of the assizes for sentencing by Mr. Justice A. M. Manson. Two teen-aged girls testified during the trial that Woods had given them "fixes" at various times during the past 15 months.

B.C. Polio Total 441

British Columbia's 1952 polio total Friday reached 441, the provincial health department reported.

The latest case was reported from Aleza Lake.

There have been 26 polio fatalities, the last one being a 24-year-old Kimberley woman last week.

In 1947, B.C.'s previously worst polio year, there were 312 cases, which included 12 deaths.

Stock Market Jitters Feature Week's Trade

BY HARRY KINGDON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Uncertainty marked stock market dealings on the Toronto exchange this week and was reflected in a declining market.

Traders have been uncertain about Korea, future business conditions and the United States presidential election for some time, and this week, another factor was added—the trader who got tired of waiting.

The upward leap of the market last week was ascribed partly to prospects of increased activity in Korea as the Communists attacked and truce negotiations were called off.

WAR NEWS

This week, however, Communist attacks eased off somewhat. Also, many observers felt that the influence of Canada's Lester B. Pearson as the new president of the United Nations Assembly was having a conciliatory effect on international disputants. This might mean a slackening of demand for many products, particularly metals.

The United States election picture will probably be confused until the returns are in. Traders will then decide whether to look for an easing of excess profits taxes and income taxes on corporations under Eisenhower, or for a continuation of them under Stevenson.

On the general business uncertainty, Harold L. Trapp, of Playfair & Company, Toronto, says: "Popular opinion these days seems to indicate some reaction in general business in the latter part of 1953. . . . The stock market may be discounting an easing-off."

Some traders this week started to sell stocks they had been holding for an upturn in the market. This selling probably was not extensive but it did have an effect on the market which has been moving low volumes all week.

It remains to be seen whether the firm upswing that took place Friday was an indication that traders have decided to buy or whether it was merely a technical correction of Wednesday's sharp declines.

The Toronto market started the week Tuesday with a general decline that turned into a sharp dip Wednesday. In Montreal, industrials rose Tuesday while papers slipped, but both turned downward Wednesday.

The decline continued in both centres Thursday but was checked Friday by a general rise.

New York followed a similar pattern: decline Tuesday, sharp dip Wednesday that continued Thursday, and then a general recovery Friday.

BROAD SELLING

From Friday to Friday, the Toronto Stock Exchange indices showed industrials down 4.33 at 313.32, golds down 4.51 at 82.50, base metals down 4.93 at 175.93 and Western oils down 6.29 at 120.08.

In the Montreal averages banks were up .06 at 31.51, utilities down .8 at 87.7, industrials down 4.0 at 200.8, combined down 2.9 at 163.31, papers down 10.60 at 664.88 and golds down 3.20 at 61.78.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was down 1.40 at $105.10.

C.P.R. Plans Big Spending At Nelson

VANCOUVER, Oct. 18—More than a million and a half dollars has been earmarked by the Canadian Pacific Railway Company for the construction at Nelson, B.C., of facilities for shopping and servicing Diesel locomotives which will transform the company's service in southern British Columbia after delivery next year.

According to William Manson, vice-president of the railway's Pacific region, an estimated $1,689,000 is the appropriation set by the company for work on the modern Diesel maintenance plant, which began in July, this year, but which was slowed down by the summertime carpenters' strike.

MONTREAL, Oct. 17 (CP)—Government of Canada issues held steady in light trading today on the Montreal bond markets. There was some strength in convertibles on the corporate market as B.A. Oil and Canadian Breweries firmed. Non-convertibles were dull.

Canada Held World's Best Spot for Investment Funds

NEW YORK, Oct. 18—Canada, which has advanced in a few decades from a colony to a major industrial and trading nation, now offers the brightest opportunity in the world for investment capital if that capital is intelligently applied, S. W. Fairweather, Montreal, vice-president of research and development, Canadian National Railways, said here today.

Speaking to the New York Society of Security Analysts, Mr. Fairweather outlined some of the factors responsible for his country's current industrial boom. The dominant factor guiding this development, he said, had been the vision and determination of Canada's people.

"Make no mistake—wealth will be had in Canada. Not fortuitously but as the result of careful planning and hard work," said Mr. Fairweather. "The development I have described, spectacular as it has been, is but the fulfillment of the vision of an earlier day, the fruit of skill, perseverance and toil. The future holds the promise of greater accomplishment fulfilling an ever-enlarging vision.

MOST RAILWAYS

"Canada uses more railway transportation per capita than any other country in the world," he noted, "and we also produce than transportation at a lower unit cost than any other country in our western world. Were it not for the cheap transportation which only an efficient railway can supply, our vast northern forests, broad agricultural plains and mining areas would lie useless and unexploited."

Canada's development was still based largely on her extractive industries, he said, but in recent years a wide variety of industries making finished goods had been established. Because of Canada's high standard of living and increasing population, her domestic markets were expanding.

Many of Canada's new developments were being built on a large pattern and required large aggregations of capital and management.

"The Lynn Lake development of Sheritt-Gordon calls for the investment of $60,000,000 before one pound of nickel is produced. The Kitimat development of the Aluminum Company of Canada will cost more than $500,000,000 and the oil pipeline to the Pacific Coast $80,000,000.

CANADIAN FINANCES

So far, United States investments in Canada amounted to some $7,250,000,000, he said. But on a pre-capital basis, Canadians had an even greater investment in the United States—more than $2,500,000,000—Mr. Fairweather pointed out that it was a mistake to conclude that Canada's industrial expansion was being financed entirely by American capital; more than 70 per cent of her requirements were coming from individual and corporate savings of Canadians, and "in addition, Canada is exporting capital to other countries at a substantial rate."

"Our rate of growth is undoubtedly related to access to United States capital but the growth itself rests upon the sound foundations of a world demand for those products which Canada can produce cheaper than any other country," he declared.

Manitoba Oils

EDMONTON, Oct. 17 (CP).—The Interprovincial Pipe Line Company today announced that Manitoba crude oil from the Virden field now is flowing through the Interprovincial Pipeline.

Company officials said that the first Manitoba crude reached its Cromer tank farm October 8. Cromer, on the Edmonton-Superior, Wis., pipeline route, is southwest of Virden and about 20 miles from the Saskatchewan border.

Southeast Saskatchewan Oil Strike Spurs Wider Search

REGINA, Oct. 17 (CP) — The recovery of an encouraging show of oil known to be lighter than 21 degrees gravity, in a joint venture being drilled by Imperial Oil Ltd. and the Tidewater Associated Oil Co. in the Wapella district of southeast Saskatchewan, was announced here today.

The well, Imperial-Tidewater Wapella No. 9 is about six miles southwest of Wapella and 18 miles west and five miles west of Moosomin, Sask.

One of the effects of the find will be to concentrate more interest in the southeast sector of the province where oil shows and indicated production discovered over the last few months have given the area a definite potential.

Bennett Formula Rules Bumps Out of Business

By BURKE CAHILL, Times Business Editor

Premier W. A. C. Bennett favors drastic changes in the financial and banking system of Canada.

Cahill

In an interview Friday the premier gave his ideas on government and business finance. He said he is strong for monetary reform.

He admits, of course, changes can only be made at the federal level.

He stressed also that he plans "no funny money pranks."

He said he has studied this country's integrated banking system closely from the time the central Bank of Canada was set up in 1935. At that time, he pointed out, he had been nominated to the board of directors.

Mr. Bennett said he believes the bumps can be taken out of business life. The ups and downs, the boom and bust of the business cycle, can be eliminated with proper financial management, he said.

BUSINESS TRENDS

Smiling, relaxed, spicing his outline with witty comment, the Premier explained he blames business slumps and depressions entirely on lack of purchasing power among the people.

"It's ridiculous to say there is too much money and not enough goods," he declared. "Have you got too much money?" he demanded.

"On the other hand," Mr. Bennett went on, "we are not afraid of surpluses. It's equally ridiculous to say there are too many goods. It's simply a matter of enough purchasing power to buy them."

The trouble is the control of money and credit is in private hands, Mr. Bennett said. The thing to do is for the central government to take over the management of the nation's money supply. With careful management, he claimed, the economy could be kept running smoothly with an adequate supply of purchasing power always on hand.

The Premier declined to comment on Social Credit hopes in federal elections. He is only concerned with British Columbia, he said.

GREAT PROGRESS

This province is in its greatest era of development, he declared. We've never had it so good. The provincial economy is being diversified, he pointed out, and we are becoming less dependent on our raw material production and primary industry.

Asked whether he favored closer economic links with Alberta, the premier said he would copy anything in Alberta that he thought was good. But he was for British Columbia first.

FAVOR INDUSTRY

His government would provide every incentive for industry to locate in this province, Mr. Bennett stressed. Social Credit is a free enterprise government, he said, and the best friend free enterprisers ever had.

As in Alberta, he said the B.C. Social Crediters would strongly encourage development of this province's oil and natural gas resources. The B.C. Petroleum and Natural Gas Act, basic law governing oil and gas development here, is now being studied closely with a view to making changes to encourage full development, re revealed.

PREMIER BENNETT

Mr. Bennett said he is tremendously enthusiastic about British Columbia's industrial future. Never was a province so rich in raw resources, and all are under development at the same time, he declared. We have oil and gas, aluminum, wood products, minerals and all the rest, and new fields are being opened up all the time, he said.

Canada Hits Export Subsidy

GENEVA, Switzerland, Oct. 17 (Reuters).—Some member countries are not happy about export subsidy clauses in the general agreement on tariffs and trade, it was learned today.

Dr. C. M. Isbister of Canada told the G.A.T.T. session that the organization should take a stronger stand on the subject. He said it was too concerned with import practices.

Export subsidies, he said, had been used increasingly in recent years. They could harm the trade of other countries.

John Leckie, leader of the British delegation, said Britain had consistently pressed for stricter control over the practice.

The future is tomorrow...

What are you worth . . . tomorrow?

Cougars Give Fred Cause For Joy, But Also Alarm

Whip Royals Convincingly; New Players Being Sought

By BILL WALKER

Victoria 6, New Westminster 3

It wasn't so many hours ago that general manager Fred Hutchinson of the Cougars sat musing in his office:

"I wish I knew where I could get a couple of hockey players," he said.

That was after the acquisition of right winger Jim Fairburn from Seattle Bombers and before Friday night's Western Hockey League game at Memorial Arena.

Today Fred is probably still wondering where he can get those same hockey players, but there's also a current of doubt running through his mind.

If he does get the hockey players he seeks, he'll have hard job placing them, or at least deciding who to replace of those Cougars who trounced the Royals, 6-3.

There were no slackers in the Cougars' most convincing victory of the young season.

Royals Strike Back Quickly

The Royals weren't long in retaliating, however.

Striking on the resultant face-off, Gordie Fashoway poked a loose puck into the unguarded net after Jerry Cotnoir had saved from Max McNab at point-blank range.

Little more than a minute later, Gordon Haidy blasted a rising shot from right wing into the top corner to give the Royals the lead.

It wasn't until 8.25 that Colin Kilburn put the Cougars back on even terms, the puck barely trickling over the line off Dechene's pads. The Royals argued mildly that Jim Bedard had cleared the puck in time, but referee Eddie Powers, on top of the play, ruled otherwise.

The cats twice spotted the Royals a one-goal lead; the second time in the third period and then came flying back to pump four straight goals past a confused Lucien Dechene.

It was by all odds the best game of the year and also the Cougars' third straight triumph at home, where they are unbeaten.

Eddie Mazur shot the Vics into the lead at 1.32 of the second period after a scoreless and intermittently rugged and well played first period on a passout from behind the net from Andy Hebenton.

An old Cougar nemesis, Blinky Boyce, tricked two men neatly before catching Cotnoir off guard with a flip shot to again give the Royals the lead, this time at 3-2, at 7.13 of the final period.

The once chastised Joe Evans, but now "atta-boy Joe" to the box seat constituents for his newly found agressiveness, put Reg Abbott in the clear with a perfect pass less than a minute later and the teams were knotted up for the third time.

Jack McIntyre then gave a beautiful exhibition of stick-handling before flipping a fast shot past Dechene at 9.17 and the Cougars were off to the races as matters progressed.

Fairburn Makes Successful Debut

Fairburn made the Cougar brass look good by scoring the fifth counter on a play made possible by Evans who forced Dechene to save on the door-step, Fairburn poking the loose puck home.

Kilburn finished off the polished display, taking Bernie Strongman's rebound off Dechene's stick and pushing the sixth counter past the, by now, frustrated fat man.

The addition of Fairburn, who played a strong game, and Evans' apparent newly found lease on life, has, with Reg Abbott as the Pivot, given coach Dorohoy the added strength to the third line he had been seeking.

And despite the fact that Hutchinson must have had some misgivings when he issued his morose remark earlier in the week, there's no doubt, off Friday night's showing at least, that the elimination process shows signs of becoming a major problem if such replacements are secured.

Tonight, the Cougars will attempt to make it a week-end double over the Royals, meeting Babe Pratt's crew at the Royal City.

Incidentally, too, the Cats will be shooting for a part, or all, of the league lead the Saskatoon Quakers will be so zealously guarding against the Edmonton Flyers at Saskatoon.

In the league's other game tonight, Vancouver Cahucks play Tacoma.

Ian Mackintosh Scoring Leader

Ian Mackintosh of Vancouver moved into first place in the Western Hockey League scoring race Friday night.

Mackintosh notched one goal and assisted on two others, while Seattle's George Pargeter was held scoreless at Calgary.

Colin Kilburn, Eddie Mazur, and Andy Hebenton of Cougars moved up also. Kilburn is in a four-way tie for fourth spot, while Mazur and Hebenton are deadlocked in fifth position.

Leaders follow:

	G	A	Pts.
Mackintosh (Van.)	7	3	10
Pargeter (Sea.)	2	6	8
Bailey (Sea.)	5	2	7
Kerr (Tac.)	2	5	7

REFS WORK TODAY, BUT WHAT ABOUT NEXT WEEK?

VANCOUVER, Oct. 18 (BUP)—Today's Pacific Coast Soccer League games were scheduled to be refereed by members of the B.C. Referees' Association, although the association's dispute over wages for the whistle-tooters has not been settled.

A meeting held in Vancouver Friday night decided that the referees would receive $12 and linesmen would get $4 for the three Saturday contests. A meeting will be held next week to thrash the pay problem out.

The referees want $12 per game and $4 for the linesmen while the soccer league is offering $8 and $4, respectively.

IT'S MY VIEW

By BILL WALKER, Sports Editor

END O' THE WEEK—Or why, oh why, have they been so long in paying tribute to the grandest of all the "grand old men of basketball," Robert Randall Whyte.

"Bob" was duly honored Friday night at Brentwood for his half century contribution to the sport he loved and served so well.

Everybody who was anybody and even the nobodys in both the city and Saanich Leagues knew Bob, or knew of him.

He was silently respected for the part he has played in the game's development and, more so, for the creed of kindliness he fused into the hundreds who passed under his wing.

AND WHAT ABOUT THOSE COUGARS: Maybe we got a hockey team after all. But as the saying goes the season's only in its diapers . . . at least the Cougars aren't selling their coach short as the boys in press row are ALREADY doing to the Canucks in Vancouver. . . . Sorry, it's not the coach over there. . . . It's Coleman E. Hall whose getting the black ink once again, the threat being there'll be more ink than customers unless things pick up. . . The Canucks did win last night, so maybe there'll be a change in the tune today . . . the penalty is to be shipped to Charlottetown where Murph Chamberlain has "my kind of team". . .

Which reminds us . . . wonder if Muzz Patrick didn't pull a fast one on father Lester? Muzz was offered Joe Medynski when the Rockets were in town Monday. . . "Unh, Unh," he said . . . so Joe was released. Who is he playing for now? Why! The Rockets . . . who else?

OF PASSING INTEREST—Memorial Arena concessions should show a profit this year, what with that nickle hot-dog now worth a quarter and the boys brewing their own orange cider in the back room. . . Can't help but wonder what the fellows in the runways are going to do these cold winter nights... Guess they'll have to drink coffee like the peasants. . .

Brooklyn's Gil Hodges certainly didn't deserve any publicity he might have received for his efforts in the World Series, but that was no reason for an Ebbetts' Field huckster to shout:

"It's your last chance for souvenirs, Hodges half price." If you didn't know, Gil went nought for 21 in the series.

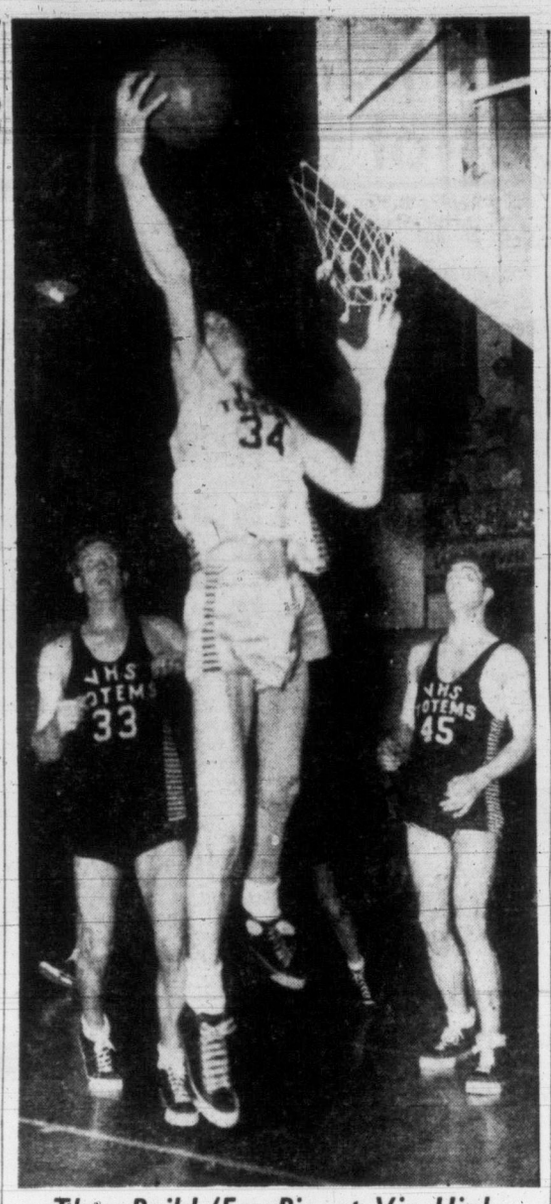
FROM HERE AND THERE—Bud Hocking says that the real "biddy basketball" is getting a 'tryout up-Island this year with lower baskets et al . . . the local version has the regulation hoops. . . . "The name's the thing," says Art Watson, "so why not start up a Domino club during the basketball revival period. . ." Yanks' Phil Rizzuto will likely be asked to cut down on his extra activities this year . . . the "scooter" has more outside interests than a duck has feathers and reportedly was all but burned out this year with a blood pressure of 95 (for medical consumption only). . .

Basketballing John Clark claims that Bill Dobbie, the young giant that walks like a boy, is destined to become a cage great, locally at any rate. . . He's finally made the majors with the Boston Braves . . . overall baseball attendance was down 16 per cent this year. . .



They Build 'Em Big at Vic High

Unlimbering his lanky frame, Ed Pedersen, bucketman for the Vic High Totems, goes high in the air to pluck a rebound off his own backboard Friday night during the annual Totems vs. Grads game. Watching Pedersen's tactics are former Vic High students and hoopsters Len Anderson (33) and Jim Jahraus (45). Totems established something of a precedent when they scored a 48-32 victory, the first time the Grads have been defeated in five years.

HOOP HISTORY!

Torrid Totems Ground Grads

Victoria High Grads ain't what they used to be.

For the first time in the five-year history of the annual Totem-Grads exhibition basketball contest the High School reps swamped the Grads to the tune of 49-32 Friday night to the everlasting glee of a huge prep crowd.

Showing every indication of having one of the strongest teams, Totems romped to a 25-15 margin at half time and increased their lead to a 37-23 edge at the three-quarter time breather.

More than 700 students and adults were on hand in the Victoria High gym to watch history being made.

BALANCED CLUB

Coach Porky Andrews' grueling practice sessions evidently paid off as the Totems presented a well-balanced line-up that hustled from the opening whistle and kept the Grads off balance until the closing gong.

Two of Totems' best players on the floor Friday night, Dave Worthy and George Dennison, paced the winners with 12 and nine points, respectively. Grads' bucketman Jim Jahraus, was top man for the losers with 11 points.

Victoria High rep girls were swamped 43-14 by a powerful Grad girls' team in the opener. Chris Boyd racked up 17 points for the Grads, while Louise Heal topped the students with six.

A crowd-pleasing performance by the majorettes and the zestful routine of the cheerleaders added color to the evening.

Scorers follow:

Grad girls: Gerry Koski 9, Vi Fetman 8, Terry Bombardier 6, Chris Boyd 17, Pat Wright 3—43.

Victoria High: Pat Sinclair 1, Virginia Barrie, Bev Koski 2, Louise Heal 6, Louella Kalk, Lois Snider, Ann Sprinkling, Jean McMillan 2, Gayle Calder, Val Speed 2—14.

Grads: Len Anderson 5, John Shields 7, Click Clark 4, Jim Jahraus 11, Pete Kirchner, Lorne Oakley 5, Lowell Hodges—32.

Totems: George Dennison 9, Bob Abbott 2, Don Donahue 8, Dave Worthy 12, Bob Zarry 1, Gordie Jones 8, Ed Pederson, Dick Sleep 3, Eddie Lou, Stan Stewart 4, Chum Crabbe 2—49.

CANUCKS NIP ROCKETS

Stamps Share Second Place

Victoria Cougars and Calgary Stampeders leapfrogged together into second place in the Western Hockey League Friday night.

Leaped over was Seattle, who lost 4-1 to the Stamps at Calgary. Victoria crushed New Westminster Royals 6-3.

Vancouver Canucks jumped into a fifth-place tie with the Royals by edging Tacoma Rockets 4-3. Last season, the champion Royals and Canucks were separated by six other teams.

A crowd of 4,189 watched Calgary pump to its third straight victory after two losses. Seattle managed to salvage only one point from their first Prairie excursion — they tied Edmonton 3-3.

The Stamps led 1-0 at the end of the first period and the rest of the scoring was confined to the second. Sid Finney, Steve Black, Roy Kelley and Bill Shvetz shared Calgary's goals. George Homenuke got the Bombers' only marker.

The shots-on-goal totals about tell the story of the Vancouver-Tacoma game before 3,500 Vancouver customers.

Doug Stevenson blocked 21 drives in the Tacoma net, Emil Francis had to handle only eight at the other end.

HICKEY NETS PAIR

Les Hickey scored twice for Vancouver, one of them the winner with three minutes left in the game. Ian Mackintosh and Jack Lancien supplied the others. Doug Adam, Gord Kerr and Bill Davidson tallied for the Rockets.

Two first-period goals left the score at 1-1 going into the last period. Tacoma went ahead 3-2 with seven minutes left, but could not hang on.

Robinson Leads Field in Prep Cross Country

Victoria High School's cross-country team breezed to an easy victory over the Normal School and Victoria College runners in a two-and-one-half-mile road race Friday.

Victoria High placed eight runners in the first 10 with Ken Robinson of the Fernwood Street crew leading the field of 38 and breaking the tape in 12 minutes and 38 seconds, a good 100 yards ahead of teammate Harry Stephens.

Third place went to Victoria High's Jim Moore.

Don Jackson and Bill Cameron topped Normal School by placing seventh and eighth, respectively.

First game starts at 7.

FLETCHER GOES ON LIMB

Prexy Picks 'Kids' To Take City Crown

No less an authority than the president himself, Doug Fletcher, picks Dick Irving's young squad to win the Commercial Hockey League title this year.

Fletcher expects Jim Lackie's Victoria Merchants to be a powerhouse but he added that in the long run he would put his money on Irving's kids to take it all.

Irving, like Ray Mitchell in Canadian football and Wally Smith in senior softball, believes the way to build a strong club is to start with youngsters. His theory is that the kids may be rough at the edges for one or two seasons but when they hit their stride they are tougher to stop than experienced veterans. Besides, Irving will tell you, they last longer.

Last year Irving's Individual Cleaners finished out of the first division but he feels the year of tough experience was just what the club needed and he vows they will hit full bloom this winter.

NEW COACH

To coach the club and handle a defense berth, Irving has secured the services of Fergie McPherson, who played with Nanaimo Clippers two years ago.

McPherson will be replacing Steve Harris, whose inspirational playing and coaching when he took over near the end of last season, gave the team a tremendous lift. Harris will not be with the club this year as he is at sea.

Back for another year in goal will be Derek McCooey. "Bones," as he is called, is in his early 20's, but is a veteran in local hockey and is a cool custodian.

A trio of defensemen returning from last year's club are Bill Robinson, Bob Seens and Ed Stusek who will join MacPherson behind the blue line together with Dave Fisher, a prairie junior.

Courtnall, a product of the Victoria minor hockey chain, played with the Brandon Intermediates last year.

Millburn was with Nanaimo juniors last year and was one of the three players temporarily suspended and then reprimanded by the British Columbia Amateur Hockey Association for allegedly assaulting a referee in Victoria last year.

RETURNEES

Four other forwards who were regulars last year and are returning and seeking berths are Art Green, Arnold Elliott, Maurice Cunningham and Berlyn Hodges.

In addition, Irving can secure John Makowski and Dougie Bamborough, starry performers who have been in the minor association, and spare goalie George Hall, also a minor.

Irving will take strings and tinsel off his club Monday night in the league opener when he meets Lackie's powerful Merchants at 7.30.

Junior Prep Soccer League Away Tuesday

The high school Junior Soccer League will get under way Tuesday with a three-game slate.

Each of the six teams in the loop will play five games in the fall term, which ends November 25.

Schedule, with home team mentioned first, follows:

October 21—
Esquimalt vs. V. H. Blacks.
V. H. Golds vs. Oak Bay.
Mt. View vs. Mt. Douglas.
October 28—
V. H. Blacks vs. Mt. View.
Mt. Douglas vs. V. H. Golds.
Oak Bay vs. Esquimalt.
November 4—

Mt. View vs. Oak Bay.
November 18—
V. H. Blacks vs. V. H. Golds.
Oak Bay vs. Mt. Douglas.
Mt. View vs. Esquimalt.
November 25—
Oak Bay vs. V. H. Blacks.
V. H. Golds vs. Mt. View.
Mt. Douglas vs. Esquimalt.

Rangers to Use Three Juniors Against Leafs

The National Hockey League may have a new leader after week-end games.

Montreal Canadiens, now two points behind the league-leading Chicago Black Hawks, can go in front by beating Boston Bruins tonight and Detroit Red Wings Sunday. The Sunday fixture is second-place Detroit's only week-end contest.

The other game tonight finds New York Rangers visiting Toronto. The Maple Leafs go to Chicago Sunday while the Rangers meet Boston. Sunday's Chicago fixture may give some indication of whether the Black Hawks are reverting to previous years' paralyzed play.

The revamped Hawks started this year in terrific fashion by winning their first four games, before being dumped, 7-0, by the Red Wings Thursday night.

The winless Leafs tonight encounter a refurbished New York squad. Beaten in three consecutive starts, Rangers have brought up three youngsters from Guelph Biltmores Juniors in the Ontario Hockey Association. The trio are defenceman Harry Howell, centre Andy Bathgate and left-winger Dean Prentice.

Howell will fill in for injured Leo Reise, expected to miss week-end games because of torn shoulder ligaments.

PUNCH WORTH $445 A THROW

PETERBOROUGH, Oct. 18 (CP) — A right-hand punch thrown by Ross Powless, Peterborough lacrosse played, last December, cost him $445 Friday.

Judge John Kennedy in a written judgment awarded Douglas Metherall $200 for facial disfigurement and pain and suffering and $245 for other damages.

Evidence was that Powless struck Metheral only once during an argument. He suffered a chipped eye socket bone, a broken cheekbone and nose and three damaged teeth.

Junior Cage Schedule Out

Following is the schedule of the junior boys' Inter-High School Basketball League.

First mentioned is home team and must supply officials and equipment.

October 23—Victoria High School vs. Mount View; Esquimalt vs. Oak Bay.
October 30—Oak Bay vs. Vic High; Mount View vs. Esquimalt.
November 6—Esquimalt vs. Vic High; Oak Bay vs. Mount View.
November 13—Mount View vs. Vic High; Oak Bay vs. Esquimalt.
November 20—Vic High vs. Oak Bay; Esquimalt vs. Mount View.
November 27—Vic High vs. Esquimalt; Mount View vs. Oak Bay.

HOWARD RUSSELL CUP REDEDICATED

Rugby Trophy Refurbished

By DON INGHAM

The Howard Russell Cup, fought yearly by rugby teams of Victoria and Oak Bay High Schools, will enter competition this season bearing the likeness of the man in whose memory it was offered.

Sculptor Earl Clark carved a likeness of the famous athlete and educator, from which a replica was cast in silver.

After Mr. Clark put the finishing touches on the silver medallion, it was attached to the trophy in the place left vacant for it when it was first offered for play in 1930.

The cup was re-dedicated this week at a ceremony at the home of Mrs. Henry Esson Young, attended by representatives of both high schools, the coaching staffs, teams of today and former years, and Victoria College.

Howard Russell, member of Queen's University championship team of 1889, came to Victoria in 1892, and during his career taught at Victoria High School, Victoria College and the University of British Columbia.

Following his death in 1926, Mrs. Young, a former teacher at Victoria High School, undertook to have a rugby trophy offered for competition to commemorate Mr. Russell's great love of the game.

She succeeded after four years of effort, and the cup was first played for in 1930.

The original likeness of Mr. Russell, carved by Mr. Clark and from which the medallion was cast, will be kept at the Provincial Library.

W.I.L. LIKELY 10-TEAM CIRCUIT

Prairie Clubs Entry In '53 'Cut and Dried'

The Western International League bids fair to become the biggest little league on the North American continent next year.

Current negotiations between W.I.L. officials and Edmonton and Calgary have reached the stage where a league spokesman has said the entry of the two prairie clubs in the league is "pretty well cut and dried."

The additional of the two Canadian squads would boost the league to 10 teams, making the W.I.L. the only 10-team league on the continent.

At Seattle Friday, John Ducey and Sam Timmins, representing Edmonton and Calgary, respectively, met with league officials and team representatives in an all-day session.

The decision reached was to submit the proposal to boards of directors of the present eight teams for final approval. Deadline for a decision is Thursday.

Opinions of the representatives in the Seattle meeting stood for admission but five team representatives, had to take the proposition back to their boards of directors for an official decision.

However, the delegates said they would strongly recommend a favorable vote.

League officials feel that travel and schedule difficulties will not be too great and could be met by having the clubs do more air travelling.

SECOND BOXING CARD SET FOR WEEK TONIGHT

The Greater Victoria Amateur Boxing Association will hold its second show of the season one week from tonight at the Britannia Branch Auditorium.

Paired off in the main event will be Bert Wilkinson, 1952 Vancouver Island middleweight champion, and Wally Rowan of the R.C.N., 1949 B.C. featherweight champ.

In 1948, Rowan defeated Rod Bolt, whom Wilkinson defeated last week in the first show of the year. Rowan is confident he can put Wilkinson's shining light out.

There will be 10 other bouts.

Fish Monger-Promoter Bemoans Crowd Limits

LONDON, Oct. 18 (CP).—Jack Solomons, king of British boxing impresarios, has big ideas for a mammoth coronation year show of his own. But he says existing restrictions on fight crowds will have to be relaxed to make it a success.

Overtures have already been made to the handlers of the world middleweight champion, Sugar Ray Robinson, and Joe Maxim, ruler of the light-heavies, with an outside chance that former heavyweight champion Jersey Joe Walcott may be enticed to London next year.

But promoter Solomons, who runs a fish business and a "bookie" establishment as sidelines, states bluntly that it takes a king's size crowd and plenty of folding money to bring top-notch fighters into the same ring.

"My bother is not with the boxers," Solomons said. "On the whole those guys and I get along fine together—even the Maxims and the Robinsons. No, my headache comes from the officials who control the size of London boxing crowds."

CEILING ON FIGHT CROWDS

And the cigar-smoking Solomons seems to have a fairly sound case at that.

For his periodic shows, staged in London's huge White City Stadium, Jack must restrict his ticket sales to about 50,000 customers, while 80,000 are permitted to watch greyhound racing in the same enclosure. At Wembley, more than 100,000 spectators are admitted to the annual soccer cup tie, while the maximum crowd attending a fighting program there would be limited to 65,000.

The payoff, however, Jack says, is the crowd regulation affecting Stamford Bridge, home of the Chelsea football club and the greyhound racing track. For the club's soccer games, some 70,000 may be admitted, with even more than that for dog races.

If Solomons attempted to stage a return match there between champion Ray Robinson and Britain's two-fisted slugger, Randolph Turpin, a crowd limit of some 11,000 would be imposed.

Solomons insists that he, as well as all other responsible fight promoters, give unqualified support to sensible limits consistent with safety, as no one wants to risk the danger of a crowd catastrophe.

But existing laws that say it is safe for 100,000 or more to watch a football game or dog race, while it is deemed unsafe for about 70,000 to assemble if the attraction is boxing, are not only unreasonable, inconsistent, but "plain daft," Solomons argues.

He suggests an organized campaign should be launched without delay to have the inconsistencies removed by act of parliament.

"Give me the same facilities as are granted football and greyhound racing and I'll guarantee to promote a coronation show that will knock your eye out," said Jack. "Without those facilities and with American television interests grabbing all the big fight gravy, I'm afraid the outlook ain't so hot."

Ninth Bowler To Hit 400 Mark

The select circle of bowlers who have reached the 400 or better mark at Capital City Bowladrome this year was swelled to nine this week when Dave McColl rolled a 408 game.

Competing in the B.C. Electric Fivepin League, McColl ran up a string of eight strikes in a row, spared the ninth frame and added two strikes for his 408 total.

McColl will be the first 400 bowler to receive one of the new engraved rings the alley is presenting to 400 bowlers.

Second Flight—10.40, Mrs. R. Rickinson vs. winner of Miss C. Stevenson vs. Miss M. Bateman match.

Third Flight—10.45, Miss A. Underhill vs. Miss K. Comerford.

'HAD ENOUGH'

Smythe Protests Referee

TORONTO, Oct. 18 (CP)—Conn Smythe, Toronto's managing director, announced Friday night he has filed a protest with N.H.L. president Clarence Campbell over the refereing of George Gravel.

Smythe claimed Gravel discriminated against the Leafs in handing out a match penalty to Tod Sloan Thursday night when Toronto was beaten 2-1 by Boston.

Smythe said he was protesting "to finally get my point across about Gravel. This is the third time Gravel has been involved in match penalties to Toronto players. I'm getting sick of it. I've had enough. We're not getting a break."

It took five stitches to close a wound on Sloan's face. He said Labine cross-checked him into the boards and cracked him over the head. Labine also was given a match penalty.

BEAUPRE WINNER

VANCOUVER, Oct. 18 (CP)—Dennis Beaupre of Banff, Alta., Friday won the British Columbia assistant professional golfers' 36-hole medal play tournament here. Beaupre shot rounds of 79-76 over the par 72 Capilano course to record a three-stroke victory over Mel White of Capilano.

Medical Supervision Prime Need in Boxing

Physician Recommends National Code

CHICAGO, Oct. 18 (AP)—A physician, formerly an athletic official, said Friday that boxing needs official medical supervision "to remove the stigma of legalized murder."

He said many boxing deaths are not accidental, as listed, but due to failure of equipment or regulations to protect the boxer sufficiently.

Dr. Frank Ferliano, former chairman of the medical advisory board to the New York State Athletic Commission, urged a national or international medical code for the sport.

Dr. Ferliano outlined his views in an article in the current issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

He said physicians attending boxers now are paid by the promoters. Only one or two state boxing commissions pay the physician directly for pre-bout physical examinations.

LACK OF KNOWLEDGE

This had resulted in lack of general knowledge about ring injuries. "One reason for this is that physicians have little desire to publish their observations because of their relationships with their employers."

Dr. Ferliano said: "All deaths in the ring are listed by the boxing authorities, commissions, and sports writers as accidental.

"They fail to analyze the mechanics of fatal injuries that most commonly are due to cereberal hemorrhage."

With the boxing audience vastly enlarged by television, the public would be "impressed with brutal clarity, that many medical reforms are needed."

RECOMMENDATIONS

The article concluded that "studies should be undertaken at once aimed at setting up better medical and examination standards, and to bring about the following changes:

"1. Improve the padding inside boxing gloves and make the leatherette and inner lining waterproof and moisture-proof.

"2. Adopt better safety mats under the canvas.

"3. Improve hand taping procedure and materials to reduce fractures and sprains.

"4. Devise more resilient, individualized mouth guards.

"5. Provide better first aid procedures at ringside.

"6. Develop a satisfactory resin substitute to prevent slipping on canvas.

"7. Provide better supervision of drinking water containers.

"8. Adopt measures to prevent periorbital (eye) lacerations and blindness.

"9. Establish uniform periodic health examinations for officials.

"10. Set up criteria for requiring immediate stoppage of a boxing bout for medical reasons.

"11. Institute neurological and electroencephalographic (brain-wave) diagnostic procedures to detect the earliest onset of the 'punch drunk' syndrome in fighters."

SCOOTER SAYS HE'S GOOD FOR THREE MORE YEARS

NEW YORK, Oct. 18 (AP)—Phil Rizzuto quit?

"Not so you can tell it," the little New York Yankee shortstop said today, juggling a thermometer between his teeth. "That report that I'm retiring after next season, why, it's ridiculous.

"I figure I have three more years at least left in me—that is, active play. Day in and day out."

The 34-year-old sparkplug, who has just completed his 12th year as a member of the Yankees (counting time out for military service), is in hospital here undergoing a few minor repairs.

"Nothing serious," he explained. "Just a little check-up to put me in good shape for next season."

ON THE COLLEGE SCENE

Viking Ruggers Plan Shawnigan Lake Trip

By GEOFF CONWAY

One week from today the Victoria College second division rugby team takes to the field for its first contest of the season as the five-team league schedule gets under way.

The first college practice will be next Wednesday as the inexperienced players attempt to whip themselves into shape for the opener.

Also on the rugby scene, the first division squad is making arrangements to journey to Shawnigan Lake to engage in an exhibition match Oct. 29.

A needed newcomer will be making his appearance in the college ranks in their next contest. He is Dick Hales, a speedy member of last year's third line, who will fill a large gap in the present college line.

* * *

Sunday the rep soccer team plays its third junior league game of the season against Punjab United on the Shelbourne Street pitch. With both teams still seeking their first victory of the young season, third place in the standings will be decided by the outcome.

The football squad is also planning an exhibition contest with Victoria High School next week as the prep institution warms up for the annual inter-high championship series.

The bowling season will be inaugurated Tuesday, pin enthusiasts trooping to Gibson's Bowladrome to open play in the College league.

* * *

Cross-country runners at the school entered their first race Friday at Victoria High School with three college entries competing against 30 high school students and seven Normal School entrants. Vic High won the competition handily, sweeping the top places.

Laurie Boulter of College finished 11th in the field, 38 seconds behind the winner, while Ron Birch and Gerry Kenney followed far behind.

* * *

The women's grass hockey squad opens its practices Monday in preparation for a round of exhibition matches before the annual Bridgeman Cup series.

* * *

Most promising prospects are Gwen Roberts, Joan Orton, Gretta Jones, Jenny Patey, Marlene Vance and Margo Wells.

* * *

The girls' basketball team will play exhibition matches this year but are undecided as far as the Hocking Cup series is concerned because such participation may interfere with exam dates as happened last year.

Coaches Hal Gregg and Norri Paget of the men's squad are preparing the team for its forthcoming opener.

OFFICIALS LOOK FOR RECORD YEAR

Minor Ice Picture Bright

If you ask the men who know minor hockey best, the local pint-sized warriors are headed for their greatest season.

Victoria Minor Hockey Association officials today pointed to the possibility of over 500 youngsters enrolling in the circuit this season.

There is every indication that this will be the best season yet, says president Bill Davison.

And that takes in a lot of territory.

The association came into being nine years ago and success marked the first venture.

In the first year of operation, Doug Fletcher's bantam squad took the coast championship.

Then fate played its part. The old Willows Arena burned down before the next season and the league had to look for new facilities.

Nanaimo Civic Arena was chosen and Fletcher and others drove an average of one team a week up to the Hub City arena for workouts.

This move paid off handsomely for that year the juvenile all-stars captured the B.C. coast championship, only to be nosed out by Vernon in their quest for the provincial laurels.

Upon completion of Memorial Arena, the league immediately resumed activities forming an association of five divisions with six teams in each.

Donations from merchants gave the association a start for necessary funds. This was followed by a Minor Hockey Night last year and a Police-Firemen broom-ball game, proceeds of which totalled approximately $2,000.

This year's activities will start sometime within the next two weeks, Davison said.

For the first time, the ice will be split for the pee-wee and bantam divisions so that four teams will be able to play at the same time.

Davison also announced that a Minor Hockey Night will be held on Dec. 12.

A television set will be the main door prize and several other prizes, including a mixmaster, pop-up toaster and a plate-glass mirror will be given away.

Four games, featuring local talent, will highlight the gala attraction.

'Y's' SEEM TO HAVE IT

Initiation's Burdens Carried With Dignity

BY JILL UPWARD

Wednesday dawned bright and clear—for some. It was the Girls' Y teens' initiation.

Dressed in frayed jeans and an old shirt on backwards, they tried to hobble around on one high-heeled shoe and one rubber boot. With blackened faces, except for their noses, which were red, and hair tied in pigtails and gay ribbons, the girls tried to collect money in cans tied around their necks. Their goal was to raise $5. Otherwise the consequences had to be taken.

Wednesday evening, in great secrecy, they were fully initiated in the auditorium.

FOAM IN THE MOUTH

Startling creatures, garbed in nylon stocking "bonnets," dad's old shirt, short skirts and knee socks, stalked Vic High's halls on Friday, writes Ruth Sones.

Running the gantlet of taunting, blue and white clad seniors, first-year Y-Teens, piled high with extra books, found that joining the club was no picnic.

Hilarious activities took place again at night when the horrified girls were forced to brush their teeth with shaving cream and walk blind-folded and barefoot through cold, cooked macaroni "worms."

EARLY HALLOWEEN

Hallowe'en came early for a group of Esquimalt High Y-Teen girls taking part in "operation initiation" at the home of Irene Rogers, writer Shirley Hallmark.

Standards chairman, Jean Saunders, and her committee, were responsible for arrangements, and the garb of a typical freshman consisted of a rubber boot and wool knee sock with a big bow on one foot and a running shoe and a nylon drawn on the other; shorts with pompon at least one foot wide on the back; a "lei" of at least six different colored socks strung around the neck and hanging down in front; red strings on arms, with lipstick, one inch apart up to the elbows; face, one half cold cream and one half cocoa, with an over-sized mouth drawn with lipstick and hair parted in the centre and one side pincurled and the other perfectly straight.

Entertainment, provided chiefly by the new members, filled the evening with fun. Those becoming eligible to take part in coming Y-Teen activities are: Maxine Neal, Dianne Adams, Pat Lysle, Pat Cornthwaite, Marian Spershott, Betty Robertson, Norma Erskine, Barb Stewart, Bev Jussup, Joyce Willy, Sally Johnson, Shirley Corry, Ester Arnason, Rosemary Ross and Janet Wright.

S. J. Willis Jr. Elects Pupils For Red Cross

By PATRICIA PETRIE

S. J. Willis High was still buzzing this past week with elections. This time it was the election of representatives to the Junior Red Cross Council.

The voting took place on October 14.

When all the votes had been tallied, results were: Margaret Osborne, IX A; Marlene Simmons, IX B; Andy Mowat, IX C; Irene Jones, IX D; Osborne Love, IX E; Marjorie Mooney, IX F; Patsy Kiers, VIII A; Pat Scurrah, VIII B; Deanna Derr, VIII C; Gurbachin Sclingha, VIII D; Jeanie Burns, VIII E; Pearl Raels, VIII F; Gary Menzel, VIII G; Ron Montgomery, VII A; Bruce Main, VII B; Claudia Donald, VII C; Maureen Shea, VII D; Gayle Warshawski, VII E; Erld Fenwick, VII F; Patsy Pye, VII G.

The sponsors of this council are Miss Christina MacNab, Mrs. Jane Paton and Mr. Robert Travis.

Music department has been busy this week and its schedule for the future seems very full. Friday, October 10, the Canadian Scottish Regimental Band put on a concert in the auditorium. This school band joined in the last two numbers.

The audience was composed of about 250 parents and friends of the students.

B. G. Gillie, principal, acted as master of ceremonies.

After the concert, refreshments were served to the band members by the Grade IX girls.

The proceeds went to the school music department.

Another item to be added to the school's activity line-up is the forthcoming Christmas concert. Friday, December 5, is the day for this variety show.

Student attendance at the Victoria Symphony concerts is being arranged and a big turn-out is expected.

The Drama Club is working hard. Next week it will be casting for plays for the Christmas variety show. Production of two short plays has been planned.

Student Government Plans for Active Year Ahead

Mount View has elected a formidable students' council to direct activities for the 1952-53 terms. They are planning an ambitious program. This progressive school is keen to establish its reputation in scholastics as well as sports. To that end the council plans.

TRADE-HUNGRY IROQUOIS LET WHITE MAN STAY

Fur Hunter's Foothold Led to New Frontier

(This is the second in a series of summaries of lectures delivered by Prof. C. S. Burchill on "Problems of Canadian Democracy" at Victoria College evening classes. Here he discusses the American background of Canada's history.)

In his first lecture, Prof. C. S. Burchill, of Royal Roads Canadian Services College, spoke of the European background of Canadian history. Now he looks at the early American influences.

Firstly, the American background was largely physical. Access to the continent was only possible by river routes, and into the lake and river chains of the interior. The greatest of these was the St. Lawrence waterway, first to be discovered, and claimed for France. Later, Henry Hudson gave his name to a second route of access.

There was little to choose, physically, between these two routes . . . and the continent was open to any power which possessed access through either.

It was the human factor which gave the advantage to the St. Lawrence and choked off the Hudson route.

This human factor was conditioned by the way of life of the natives.

They were not numerous . . . probably not more than 2,000,000 in all North America at any time, and perhaps 200,000 in Canada . . . yet the continent was overpopulated. Thousands died each year from starvation. In the north, the tribes lived on meat and dressed in furs, but human and game populations were in precarious balance. Only the toughest survived. But they had a superfluity of furs.

To the south, a more settled culture prevailed, based on primitive agriculture. They needed furs. There was a natural basis for barter.

And there was barter. But for the most part, exchange was by plunder of war parties.

Nevertheless, between the two zones of culture, the Hurons and Iroquois existed as kinds of middlemen.

When the white trader came the pattern of exchange was upset.

The fur foraging Indians were willing to deal with the whites. The Iroquois and Hurons fought to retain their advantages, particularly the former.

In fact, the Iroquois, whose country lay athwart the St. Lawrence and Hudson-Mohawk routes were able to control or strangle trade by either route. They fought hard to maintain themselves to the extent of exterminating the Hurons, their rivals and massacring white men whenever they encountered them as interlopers.

They did not want to drive the white man out. On the contrary, they wanted to trade with him for the wealth he offered. But they wanted to trade on their own terms as middlemen for the continent's hunters.

It was the fur traders who ultimately forced their way inland to trade with Indians whom the Iroquois had so effectively discouraged. From Montreal they pushed on to Trois Rivieres, and, later into the unknown wilderness around and beyond the Great Lakes.

Company servants could not be expected to take the risks involved for wages. So private traders, under license from the original monopoly companies, got into the fur field. Those who survived frequently settled down to farming and commenced to fabricate the new frontiers.

WHO'S TO BE BLAMED? HURT KIDS CAN'T TALK

BY SHIRLEY HALLMARK

There's a little bundle in the street . . . huddled and hurt. It might be your brother or sister.

That's the sort of lesson Victoria policemen taught to students at Esquimalt High School in a traffic safety program this week.

Sergeant Brooke Douglass and Constable Ian Duncan, members of the Victoria Police Department, stressed the importance of good driving habits.

They brought to the attention of all motorists who feel that accidents are the other fellows' fault or just a minor offense, that the blame is shared by all concerned.

Perhaps not until after the showing of the film "And Then There Were Four," did many realize the truth in these statements.

White Elephants And Pies Adorn Esquimalt's Halls

Stalls for everything, from white elephants to home-cooking, will adorn the halls of Esquimalt High School November 28, with added attractions such as varied games and amusements.

Under the chairmanship of Ron Smith, the committee heads are: Raffle, Roy Byfield; refreshments, Doreen Ray; candy, Y-teens; home-cooking, Junior Red Cross; construction, Ed Walters; publicity, Ray Bryant; Christmas cards, Bryan Mee; games, Hubert Parry; and cashiers, Brenda Sigrist and Audrey Beaumont.

The committees will be assisted by the executive of the Students' Council and the teaching staff.

Students in the school will have a chance to try their guessing skills next week by entering the Junior Red Cross jelly bean contest. The number of candies in a large jar is the goal, and what could be a more appropriate prize than the jelly beans themselves?

They Guide St. Ann's Students' Council Activities

CULLED Off The CAMPUS

"Camosunet" readers were surprised to see "newsboys" selling the first issue of the school paper in the halls Thursday. Designed to put an end to reading by borrowing, the plan is also expected to raise the paper's funds considerably.

CALORIES LIGHT, CURRICULUM HEAVY

Student Faces Monumental Task On Short Diet in French System

(M. Ray Halin is a Paris-born journalist and entertainer. He visited Victoria in the course of a Canada-wide tour to broaden his own education and, incidentally, to provide himself with material for articles for publication by the news agency he represents. He was aboard the Canadian Pacific Princess Kathleen when she was lost on the west coast on the way to Alaska. He is a versatile character. He was trained for the concert stage and, when the going gets tough, he says, he sings for his supper . . . as he did at Club Sirocco here.)

BY RAY HALIN

Due to the highly concentrated population of France, the competition for position is always keen.

It starts in the school. At four, the little boy or girl goes to his or her first classes, instead of at six, as in Canada. Moreover, the pupil carries a far heavier load throughout the school years. It is considered in France that he must have a broader background on which will be built the frame of specialization when he arrives in the late teens and early twenties. Thus the student has a better coefficient of versatility; and, if opportunity or conditions change, is still equipped.

From four to six the child is mainly concerned with reading and figures. After that his education starts in earnest, with geography, history and art. At eight, he will tackle the natural sciences, in a simple form, and build up to those general sciences required for the "Certificat d'etudes primaires." This is achieved at age 12 or 13.

This certificate is something more than high school entrance and something less than junior matriculation. But it is estimated that the French student of 12 or 13 is about three years ahead of his Canadian public school counterpart.

In the next two or three years the student gets his "brevet elementaire" which is much the same as a high school diploma. By 18, or a little later, he will have attained his "brevet superieur."

Very often, at 19 or 20, the student is ready to teach the lower grades. But he is equipped by that time to specialize.

LIET A HANDICAP

It should be remembered that the students of France still live on a very much restricted diet, due to the conditions arising out of war. Acceptance in engineering school, which requires tremendous effort, is almost literally a matter of life and death to the student working on short rations.

What makes the French curriculum so much harder than the Canadian, I think, is the fact that there is no choice, or selectivity, allowed. The student takes the curriculum available; and that is that. But the system pays off in the broader training of the scholar . . . if he can survive.

If a student chooses to seek a "baccalaureat" he must have the "langue morte," such as Latin or Greek. The foundation is of immense assistance in mastering foreign tongues later. Aiming at the "baccalaureat" it is necessary to concentrate more on literature and history than when seeking the brevet. But foreign languages, in any event, are required subjects.

In Europe, where so many different tongues live side by side, languages assume a greater importance than in, for instance, Canada or the United States. The emphasis on languages is even more apparent in Belgium, Holland, Denmark, Norway and Sweden than it is in France. English almost everywhere is a necessity.

One is tempted to believe that a common language in Europe would not only ease the student's burden but be a long step towards better understanding and the avoidance of war. But that is beside the point.

Life for the student in Canada is easier, for opportunities are many.

When I think how friends of mine labored to enter the competitive examinations for the engineering schools of France, I am distressed. So many worked so long, only to miss their opportunity. For out of the class of thousands who sit for the examination, only 10 per cent of the "passing" students can be accepted. It is heart-breaking.

Nevertheless, it ensures the highest possible standard of scholar in the specialized fields.

HALLOWEEN HOP

Oak Bay Set For Hoe-Down

BY BRIAN GRIER

The first big social highlight of the year at Oak Bay High will be the "Halloween Hayride," hard-time dance, on October 31.

Brian Priestley, Murray Little and Bill Gosling are in charge of arrangements.

Basketball, soccer and grass hockey top the sports schedule. Senior and junior basketball workouts began last week in preparation for league play.

On the inter-house soccer scene, Houses 3 and 4 defeated Houses 1 and 2, respectively, in the first round of play on Tuesday.

In grass hockey this week, the two previously undefeated senior girls' teams, the Greens and the Whites, battled for the league leadership. The Greens came through with a hard-fought 2-0 victory, to take over sole possession of first place.

CUP'S HISTORY

Several members of the staff and last year's rugby team were entertained at the home of Mrs. Esson Young on Tuesday afternoon, where they learned something of the history of the Howard Russell Cup, emblematic of high school rugby supremacy.

The cup has recently been adorned with a beautifully sculptured medallion showing the face of the late Professor Howard Russell.

Dave Watkins, assisted by the art staff, is in charge of publicity for "Captain Kid's Carnival," to be held December 3. Committee heads are now busy scouting for loot to be sold at the fair.

TAKE IT FROM ME

By AMY BANDREVICK

I've noticed recently that many magazines and periodicals have been using a new style of writing. You may have noticed it too, and got the same impression that I did. For the last few months it has been nearly impossible to pick up a magazine without seeing a story titled "The Truth About ——." These articles range from the truth about some new wonder drug to the truth about the love life of an ant. The worst offenders, however, are the popular movie and fan magazines that have been printing the "Truth" about everyone from Joe DiMaggio to Elizabeth Taylor.

What is the cause of this sudden phase of honesty? It makes you wonder just how much of the previously printed material was true and what was a great big, or little white, lie. Honesty is the best policy, 'tis said by well-informed sources; but this sudden reformation is slightly baffling, to say the least.

There must be some reason for it.

* * *

Speaking of honesty and soul-searching, I wonder how those forest fires on the Malahat got started. Is a careless hunter, lazy motorist, hiker or hot-footed little animal responsible?

Thanksgiving Day evening the fire could be seen plainly as the burning trees glowed scarlet against the inky background of evergreens and the leaden canopy of smoke. It was a frighteningly beautiful sight, being so far away, yet looking so near. I could even smell the smoke as it drifted in from the hills. It seems funny, but I can't even think of a forest fire, much less see one, without thinking of the movie "Bambi" and visualizing again the helpless, wild animals driven from their homes into panic and destruction. It's something like that that makes you take note and count your blessings and be thankful.

* * *

Still on the subject of animals, a huge yellow pooch wandered into my psychology lecture the other day and put on quite an act for us all. It was a friendly type of dog and apparently fond of perfume, because he picked the most sweetly scented lassie in the class and licked her hand. Not being interested in the subject, I suppose, he walked haughtily out, leaving us to ponder his behavior.

Man's best friend is supposed to be the dog, but that is not always the case. Some people are scared stiff at just the mention of this animal. In fact, some consider people as their best friends. You think that strange? Well, just the other day a friend of mine wrote to tell me that my letters were the best cure for homesickness ever discovered.

D. Thomas Heads Students Council At Mt. Newton

By SANDRA SHAW

Mt. Newton High's students have elected their council for the year.

It is as follows: President, David Thomas; secretary, Norma Bickford; treasurer, Claudia Butler; vice-president, Charlie Johnson.

The Junior Red Cross also elected representatives: President, Norma Bickford; secretary, Georgette Scriver, and treasurer, Paddy Patterson.

Thursday the students met to plan their Halloween party, to be held in the Saanichton Hall from 7.30 to 10.30, Oct. 24.

The program committee intends to present a ten-minute amateur talent show on this occasion, with singing, piano playing and recitation included.

SCHOLARS' ROSTRUM

BY ANNE SKELTON

I have often thought how important it is that students before leaving high school should learn the art of public speaking.

Recently, I listened to an hour of campaign speeches. There were many candidates of exceptionally high calibre.

The movements of the managers and contestants were familiar: the hurried steps to the platform; the turning to acknowledge the chairman, staff and students; the clasping of notes that are seldom used, and the final sigh of relief when the ordeal is over.

The catch phrases, too, were familiar: "I will do my utmost if elected . . ." "Regardless of whom you elect . . ." and "My opponent has promised to . . . but, I do not intend."

The candidates had long lists of recommendations from former experience in similar lines to rather far-fetched stabilizing ideals, thought to be needed for a particular office.

The boys slouched, hands shoved deep in their pockets; the girls tripped daintily, smoothing their skirts and worrying about their make-up.

The actual candidates were of two types: the shy, reserved student and the all-around fellow.

And, here lies the factor which will make or break the contestant's platform. The all-around man thinks nothing of rising before a crowd, not necessarily cracking jokes, but feeling completely at ease and conveying this feeling to the audience. On the other hand, the nervous chap at once makes his audience feel embarrassed by fumbling for words or by giving forth with an uninterrupted, memorized speech. He freezes. So does his audience.

It is obvious to the average voter that this candidate would be useless in a responsible job. He might prove to be an excellent person. But, who can tell?

It is essential for the student to leave high school with the ability to think clearly and convey his reasoning to others. Although no B.C. schools offer any course in this line, one can benefit through participating in one's school campaigns, elections and clubs, especially drama societies and forums. They are the means at your disposal to buildng up self-confdence and the ability to express opinions.

PUZZLES AND PASTIMES

PARTY PERKER

Tricks of thought-reading always are party pastimes that interest a maximum number of persons of all ages. Here is one easy method that usually mystifies most of those who witness it:

Announce that you will do some mind-reading. Explain that during your absence from the room an assistant will request each of three or four persons to touch or indicate an article in the room. On your return you will indicate which article was touched by each.

Your assistant, of course, has been prepared in advance. Between the two of you, you have agreed upon some number, such as 4756, as a key, and have memorized it. The ciphers must all be different and not too low.

When you return to the room, you stand with your back to the assistant to counteract a suspicion of visual signalling. The assistant then goes around the room pointing at various objects, always in the same tone of voice, and using the same phrase, "Is this the object Mary touched?" or "Is this the object John touched?" Placing your hand to your forehead and with a great show of concentration, you name the objects touched correctly, for you know that Mary's object will be the fourth one named by your assistant, John's the seventh object named and so on, in accordance with the previously agreed numerical key.

Done smoothly the demonstration is very effective. Various other signal schemes can be arranged and used, so that detection is difficult.

UNCLE BOB TIMES CLUB $25 PUMPKIN PRIZES

First we will quickly announce last week's prize winners and then go on to talk about the pumpkin contest because I want you to tell how big your pumpkins are.

Here are the prize winners for last week:

Darlaine Cutt, Parker Ave., R.R. 4, Victoria.
Patty Wills, 655 Grenville St.
Irene Hillis, Sidney B.C.
Dianne Smith, 3298 Tennyson Ave.
Barbara Phipps, 1640 Cedar Hill Cross Road.

Continue doing what you like best to compete for the five prizes of one dollar each awarded every week.

MEASURE YOUR PUMPKINS

Now for the pumpkin contest for more than a hundred members who announced they had planted seeds in an effort to grow the biggest pumpkin in the world.

We have $25 to give away for prizes.

It's your club. How do you think we should distribute it?

I think the biggest one should get the biggest prize, don't you?

Good idea might be a first prize of $10, a second prize of $5 and five prizes of $2 each.

Write and tell me what you think.

Here is what I would like you to do now.

Measure your pumpkins, the way that gives you the largest measurement, of course.

If you haven't a tape measure handy, use a piece of string and then measure the string with your school ruler.

When you have done this send in a note to Uncle Bob Times Club, Victoria Daily Times, and before Hallowe'en a judge will come out to see if you are one of the winners. He will also take pictures of the winners with their pumpkins.

Please don't forget to do this because there are so many entries we can't get around to every one. The judge will take the measurements you send in. From these he will see which are the largest pumpkins by the measurements you give and then he will come out to see them.

Dear Uncle Bob:

LAWFUL PURSUIT

John Doe entered the office of Richard Roe to complete his specialty law training, agreeing to pay him a fee when he won his first suit in law.

Before the termination of Doe's pupilage, Roe got tired of waiting for his money, having been put to some expense in connection with Doe's presence in the office, and determined to sue Doe for the amount. He reasoned thus:

If I win this case Doe will be compelled to pay me by decision of the court; if I lose it he will have to pay me by condition of our agreement, he having won his first suit.

But another lawyer whom Doe consulted decided that he need not be alarmed at Roe's intention, for there was a flaw in Roe's reasoning.

Answer: If the court decided in Doe's favor, he would not, of course, have to pay the money. If it decided against him he would not have to pay Roe the money, at least for the time being, for he would not have won his first suit.

BREAKERS AT BAMFIELD

(Photo by British Columbia Travel Bureau)

At the Roundabout

In England royalty plays a leading part in setting fashions for men and women.

Merriman

According to a newly-published book, "Smith's London Journal," by H. Allen Smith, American humorist who went to England for his information, young men are following the dress style of the Duke of Edinburgh who likes double-breasters and leaves the bottom button undone. He likes them roomy so he has room to swing his arms. That's the style of all fashionable young men in England now. They also copy his walk—brisk, with the head a little forward.

Mustaches and beards are also coming back in England. For some mysterious reason, men with red ones let them grow beyond all bounds of normality.

On this side of the Atlantic, having no royalty to set the style, people turn to movie stars and other public characters to give the lead.

This being so the advice of Screen Beauty Loretta Young in next week's magazine section becomes authoritative.

She advises teen-agers not to be sloppy in their "casuals."

She's dead against girls wearing blue jeans with shirt tails hanging out.

In this costume, she says, they look about as glamorous as a piece of burned toast. They are unattractive to young men. It shuts romance out of their lives.

It's a good article.

Mothers and daughters can gain valuable information from it.

★ ★ ★

On the subject of girls, but no connection with Loretta's article, Fabian of Scotland Yard also writes about them next week.

His article is about cocktail girls in London and how they fleece wealthy playboys.

The ex-detective superintendent's articles are proving among the most interesting ever to appear in the magazine section. They will run for a month or two more.

Local writers contribute two interesting articles.

Remember when the flu epidemic swept the city in 1918. Marguerite Laughlin recalls the details in her weekly article on Victoria history. The death toll of the plague was greater than four years of war.

★ ★ ★

Stamp Expert R. Nairne steps from his usual place next week for greater space on a different page to tell how envelopes tell the story of Victoria's earlier aims and ambitions.

"Advance Victoria! — 100,000 in 1910" was a slogan they used on "covers" as the philatelists called them in 1906.

Make it "in 1953" and it would be a suitable slogan for today.

"No cyclones, no blizzards, no malaria fever, no earthquakes" was another appeal in favor of Victoria made at that time by the old Victoria and Island Development Association which preceded the Victoria and Island Publicity Bureau.

If you have a youngster in the Uncle Bob Times pumpkin growing contest you might call his attention to the article of Page 12 announcing $25 in prizes and calling for information on the size of the pumpkins to be sent in within the next few days.

It's All Done With String

This is a triple trick of Harry Vickers who gets his nature studies at Lake of the Seven Hills, Saseenos. First he used a string to snap his camera to get the original picture of this fearless little squirrel. Then he got the squirrel to pose for him while he colored his photograph. Then he snapped a string to get the picture of the two, or should it be three, in action.

NATURE TALKS — ROBERT CONNELL

Oddities of Flowers

In addition to the general pleasure to be found in a flower garden there are minor ones not to be overlooked. Some of these have to do with the individual peculiarities or oddities of flowers, and some with the insect visitors who have their own special interests to consider.

Connell

This summer I have been particularly interested in the flowering of the Cornish heath, to botanists, Erice vagans. This interesting and freely flowering plant comes to us as its English name shows from Cornwall where it is particularly developed in the neighborhood of that peninsula known as the Lizard.

MEDITERRANEAN SPECIES

With that exception it is chiefly a Mediterranean species extending from Spain to Egypt.

We know it here of course as a cultivated plant in two colors, one white, the other purplish pink. The flowers grow near the summit of the stem in an elongated cluster and are normally pink but are also found on other plants white. The young shoots grow up from the centre of the flower cluster which may be found later as a rather persistent cluster of brown husks.

This year the Cornish heath in our garden has varied the regularity of its flowering by producing below the usual cylindrical flower clusters numbers of tiny flowering shoots. A dozen or more of them encircle the stem, each an irregular miniature of the main cluster.

This curious variation occurs on both pink and white plants. While the general appearance of the heath beds is not greatly altered, there is nevertheless a suggestion of extraordinary vitality in the plants.

I should be glad to hear if any of my readers having this species of heath have noticed the same unusual growth.

BEES ARE TRAPPED

Among the heath beds wasps and bees are constant visitors, especially the latter of which there are large numbers. This fact seems to have come under the notice of a large garden spider, the one with a white cross on its abdomen. She has carefully stretched her web from a shabby leaf of a tall larkspur to the closely adjacent Cornish heath bed.

The threads are so fine as to be almost invisible except when the sunshine falls athwart them or the morning dew makes them shine.

Along the death-line are already strung one or two bees securely wrapped up after the manner of Egyptian mummies.

I found one of these unfortunates the other day in the very first stages of its capture and tried to set it free for it seemed at a glance to be very lightly held prisoner, but I was mistaken, for, do my best, I was unable to extricate it from the deadly thread.

Passing by later in the day I found it in the stillness of mummyhood. The spider herself occupies the interior of a shabby leaf from which the threads run out.

MASTERPIECE OF INGENUITY

It is by no means a pretty dwelling and certainly does not come up to the claims of a certain relation who in once familiar verses spoke of her apartment as "the prettiest little chamber that ever you did spy." But it serves as an office to which messages come over the wires sent by the unwilling victims. If you get a favorable position and a favorable light you will find at any rate that the silken web is a masterpiece of delicacy and ingenuity.

LIFTING THE LID OFF LONDON

Confidence Men in Plush Hotels

Underworld Tricksters and Thieves Wage Day and Night Siege With Variety Of Confidence Tricks

BY EX-DETECTIVE ROBT. FABIAN

"Put these papers in the hotel safe for me, please," said the tall and soldierly gentleman in the expensive tweeds. "They're rather valuable."

The big envelope rustled and crackled impressively. The hotel manager bowed. "Pleasure, colonel."

"And are there any letters for me?"

There were. Half a dozen important-looking envelopes, some with crests, some with embossed seals.

The colonel took them.

Later, when guests had retired to bed, a night cleaner discovered a batch of papers in a deep armchair in one of the lounges. They were income tax forms and receipts, for many thousands of pounds. They bore the name of the colonel. Next morning they were returned to him by the manager.

SO OUT HE WENT

The colonel thrust them into his pocket. "Oh, thanks—blasted income tax," he said. The manager was very respectful by this time.

That afternoon, as the waiter was almost falling over the little coffee tables to ensure that the wealthy colonel was not kept waiting for the expensive cigars he had just ordered, a quiet man in an unobtrusive lounge suit came into the room and gazed around it with practiced care. Nobody noticed him.

His glance fell upon the soldierly-looking gentleman. He smiled sadly and moved over to him.

"Pack your bags, Jim," he murmured almost affectionately, "and pay your bill with good money—and don't take any silver spoons or spare towels with you, my boy. And if you're not out of this hotel within 15 minutes . . ."

The "colonel" went pale. But it was not with indignation. He did not argue. Before the 15 minutes he had left the Splendide Hotel for ever.

And that was just another incident in the day's routine of ex-Detective-Inspector Jock McBogey, who is house detective—he calls it "security superintendent" in one of London's most exclusive hotels. He had recognized the soldierly gentleman as an oft-convicted confidence trickster.

"It's the easiest trick in the world to tinker with your income tax papers and make 'em look as if you're a millionaire," he says. "And the same with bankbooks."

The big hotels of London are in a state of daily—and nightly—siege by the tricksters and thieves of the underworld and their women.

The more exclusive and snooty an hotel the more will bad lads strive to get inside it, where pickings are rich.

Nearly ever West End hotel has its own "Millionaires-row"—entire floors of expensive suites where the world's wealthiest people can live, for months and years, paying rents up to £85 a week not including meals!

The job of keeping screwsmen out of these suites is one duty of the hotel detective.

So the hotels snap up ex-Yard men at comfortable salaries—£500 to £1,200 on top of their police pensions—to become hotel detectives, privileged to enjoy all meals at the hotel, keep their own bedrooms and offices. They have their own staffs of two to five ex-Metropolitan C.I.D. men under them.

Here's a few of them, all ex-colleagues of mine at Scotland Yard; Detective-Inspector Fred Elliott at the Dorchester, Inspector Jenkins at the Savoy, Detective-Inspector Jim Rignell at Grosvenor House, Detective-Inspector Cecil Warner at the Regent Palace, Detective-Sergt. Gray at the Hyde Park Hotel, Detective-Sergt. Nicholls at the Cumberland.

You might be horrified to realize how much an hotel detective can get to know about you without asking you a single question.

There is even a private code used between hotels in pasting labels on luggage. Many of the big Continental hotels use it. I dare not disclose it—except to tell you that if the label is upside down it means a rotten tipper!

If your luggage cases are expensive, but your shaving brush, razor, and underwear are cheap, the hotel detective staff is likely to keep you under wary, invisible scrutiny.

LIKE THREE OLD FRIENDS

Drunks are easy. McBogey and his assistants can whisk a troublesome drunk from bar or lounge without any guest noticing what has happened. They each seize his arm above the elbow, twist their fingers around the bottom of his jacket-sleeves, and talk to him with wide, easy smiles, effectively drowning his mumbling protests, as they stroll to a taxi like three gentlemen in happy talk.

Women are the worst problem. A young lady may book a room, or sit in the lounge for coffee. She smiles at a man. Is he an acquaintance? He might even be her husband, with whom she is trying to patch up a quarrel. Or it may be that immorality has come to the hotel.

A wrong word, a hasty decision, and the hotel is due for a savage legal action, with heavy damages.

Yet it is a serious offence for an hotel keeper to "allow persons to congregate for immoral purposes," and one of the most amazing compliments to the diplomatic efficiency of London's hotel detectives is the fact that a prosecution under this clause is almost unknown in the Metropolis.

"Anyone can spot a genuine honeymoon couple," says McBogey. "They're no problem. But the hard-ened sinner who signs 'Mr. and Mrs. Smith' with a flourish is difficult.

ONE WAY TO TELL

"Even so, you can tell them—when they come to the reception clerk and discuss type of room, price, with bath or lounge, etc. A real husband and wife exchange little glances, a kind of private telegraphy. And when they get to their room, they want to know about things like hot-water bottles, the valet service, how long the laundry takes.

"But the sinner and his week-end girl, when they get to their room, ring down for drinks! Also, their luggage is often of different quality."

The name of a good hotel must not appear too often in the divorce news. But every hotel gets caught occasionally. Then the house charge is five guineas for making chambermaid, waitresses, etc., available for questioning by private inquiry agents.

HIS SECRET KEY

When you go to your hotel room and snip down the little catch fixed to the inside door lock the chambermaid cannot get in.

But McBogey can. He carries a special key, and there is a secret flange inside the lock that operates the "privacy catch" on the door when McBogey turns his key in reverse.

If he catches a guilty couple he will not make a scene. He will tell them that their "custom is no longer required." And he will take a penetrating look at their faces with his trained policeman's eye.

They won't get into that hotel again. Nor, under the same name, in any hotel of the combine.

They will always "regret there is no room available." For the hotel detectives, guardians of fabulous fortunes in furs, jewels—and morals—have a private black-list of their own.

It would be worth much to a blackmailer. But no blackmailer will ever see it. For blackmailers rate even lower with Jock McBogey than "honeymooners without marriage lines," as he delicately calls them!

OF CABBAGES AND KINGS — PETER ELIOT

Of Musicians, Singers, Actors and Writers

Maurice Ravel, celebrated French musician—best known, perhaps, for his Bolero—had a sense of humor as keen as his musical ear. He spent most of his time in his country house "Belvedere," which he enjoyed showing off to the many friends who visited him.

"He took a childlike pride," writes Madeleine Goss in "Bolero, the Life of Maurice Ravel," "in the success of the 'illusion' of his salon. Nothing pleased him so much as to be able to tell visitors who admired his rare prints and fine porcelains: 'But it's all imitation—it comes from department stores!'

"He cherished a ball of smoked crystall on a pedestal in his salon, and point it out with such pride that his guests invariably exclaimed in real or pretended admiration. Then he would burst out laughing: "'It's nothing but a burned out electric light globe . . .'"

He never trusted critics after a concert in Paris. A musical society decided to give an anonymous concert of works of contemporary musicians.

The audience was to listen, pass judgment and guess the identity of the authors of the various numbers.

On the evening of the concert Ravel sat in a box with some of his friends and awaited the reaction. A new number of his The Valses was to be played. By this time (about 1920) he was a prominent man of music; works from his pen usually were well received.

"The audience," writes Miss Goss, "proved singularly disconcerted by The Valses. Some of them were even roused to fury; cat-calls and hisses resounded through the hall—scarcely anyone had a good word to be said for the work. Few if any guessed who the composer was . . . Through the ensuing hullabaloo Ravel made no sign. Later, when the critics discovered who had written The Valses, they revised their judgment and found qualities they had failed to discover at the first hearing!"

At one time Ravel taught and he once listened to a child who plodded through the beautiful Pavane with industrious but uninspired effort. When he could tolerate it no longer, he said:

"Listen my child—what I wrote is a Pavane for a Dead Princess, not a Dead Pavane for a Princess!"

At a concert in Detroit, the hall was so cramped that Madame Ernestine Schumann Heink, famous soloist, had to make her entrance from the rear, passing through all the music stands. All went well till her familiarly large proportions knocked over a music rack.

"Go sideways, Madame," whispered the conductor, Gabrilowitsch.

Ernestine stopped for a moment, gave a puzzled look from right to left, and called back to the conductor in a hoarse whisper,

"Mein Gott, I have no sideways!"

Drooping in an armchair one night in his New York club, John Barrymore, none the better for having imbibed unwisely, was approached by an acquaintance who was trying hard to be funny.

"Is it true Mr. Barrymore," he asked, "that you see pink elephants?"

For a moment nothing happened. Then the profile rallied, his eyes cleared, and he became once more majestic and magnificent.

"No, sir," he said coldly, "pink elephants see me."

The literary curious are guessing at why John Buchan called his famous mystery "The Thirty-Nine Steps." He wrote the novel while he was staying with his friends, the Drummonds at their place in Penshurst, where there was a fine rockery of natural formation with caves and a flight of stone steps. It was from these steps that Buchan took his title although there are 42 of them. Jack Daw (writing in John O' London Weekly) wonders if Buchan thought that would not sound as well, or horrible thought, not bother to count them properly, or else, choose 39 because it was more mystical sounding. There is also a suggestion that Buchan was aware that the Forty-Two Articles (of the Church of England) had been reduced to Thirty-Nine!

Radar to Trap Palace Intruders

Iron Curtain of Electronic Devices Will Protect Queen and Household From Coronation Pranksters

BY HELEN CATHCART

Most elaborate security precautions ever known in a royal residence have been installed at Buckingham Palace to protect the Queen and her household from Coronation intruders.

Behind screens specially erected to shield the workmen from prying eyes, engineers have just completed an iron curtain of electronic devices guaranteed to foil the most foolhardy cranks or wager-mad pranksters.

Not long ago two American students successfully surmounted the revolving iron spikes and 10-foot wall along Constitution Hill and calmly curled up for the night in their sleeping bags. Today they would have to face a "seeing eye" belt of concealed copper wires which flash instant warning of anyone touching or even approaching them.

In the palace police headquarters a dancing spotlight on radar-like screen pinpoints the position of the intruders within ten feet and, through the 24 hours, police reserves with trained Alsatian dogs are on immediate call to close in.

ALL POINTS COVERED

Gates and other gap-points are controlled by photo-electric cells which give an alarm if the contact is broken. Formerly only the royal apartments were protected by a burglar-proof system. Now all vulnerable points are covered and each alarm point is linked by a special line direct to the information room at Scotland Yard.

So trigger-sensitive is the new system that a false alarm was caused by a prowling tomcat. Police and military guards gave chase, squad cars sped from Scotland Yard and a startled cat found for once that it couldn't look at the Queen.

Yet in sober fact the protective arrangements around the Royal Family were in drastic need of an overhaul. Over the past two years at least a dozen unlawful entries into their residences have been reported. The infringements have ranged from a sportive drunk who tried to run off with a diplomatic box to the armed men who broke into Marlborough House in the small hours and stabbed Queen Mary's housekeeper.

In one case a man who had escaped from a mental home was found wandering in the Buckingham Palace grounds and proved to have a key which unlocked nearly every gate in the grounds. Of an obsolete pattern he had used it to open a lodge gate and it happened to fit the old-fashioned locks used on various gates for over 50 years. They all had to be changed as a consequence.

BROKE INTO BEDROOM

Scarcely less frightening were the results of an inquiry into the "Princess Margaret man," as the palace staff call the young well-dressed intruder who climbed through a window into a maid's bedroom at 3 a.m., asking to see Princess Margaret. With quick presence of mind the maid suggested that the young man would first like to make himself presentable and showed him to a bathroom.

But the inquiry disclosed that she then had to run nearly 50 yards along a corridor to the nearest guard box, delay ensued while the guard telephoned the police lodge and it was nearly eight minutes before police seized the man. In that time, had he known the way, he could easily have made his way to an adjacent royal bedroom.

Again, when the armed man broke into Marlborough House and Mrs. Knight aroused the household with her screams, it was found that neither the military sentries nor the soldiers off duty in the guardroom joined in hunting her assailant. Their duties were regarded as ceremonial . . . and so, no doubt, was the role of the drummer stationed at Buckingham Palace to beat the alarm if anything untoward happened!

POLICE RESPONSIBILITY

After the Marlborough House sensation, War Office spokesmen still insisted that the safeguarding of royal residences was a police responsibility. Inside Marlborough House, with its 200 rooms, one uniformed policeman and a special branch man was deemed sufficient. At Windsor, a heavy onus rested on several aged watchmen. Other royal residences had armed sentries at the front while no one watched the tradesman's entrance at the rear.

These security arrangements have now been more than adequately tightened up. Yet one can sympathize with the Duchess of Kent who is said always to keep a policeman's whistle under her pillow!

Moviegoers will recall the film based on the exploits of the "Boy Jones," the grimy urchin who thrice invaded Queen Victoria's privacy and was even dragged from beneath a sofa in the Queen's dressing room. If a modern Boy Jones managed to bypass the electronic circuit and reach the grounds of Buckingham Palace, he would then foul trip wires that switch on a battery of automatic floodlights. Under their glare he would find himself an easy mark for the police reinforcements.

SCREENING PERSONNEL

Court circles in London, however, are disturbed at the fact that, despite these revolutionary precautions, access to the Queen's home is still absurdly easy—via the staff door. Officials of the old-school question whether the screening of new personnel is fully adequate. When the Queen was at Clarence House it transpired that a woman on her staff had a police and prison record and had been in the dock at the Old Bailey. In another instance, a chef at Buckingham Palace proved to be a navy deserter who had been on the run for three years.

At one time new palace staff was unfailingly enrolled from among the families of old servants to whom royal service was a tradition. Sons and daughters of footmen and maids had their names put down for jobs almost from birth. Today this supply has dried up. New servants are sometimes recruited from the Westminster Employment Exchange and other sources. And, as Mr. Ainslie, the Queen's butler, has complained, "You never really know who you're getting!"

Often the necessary "screening" is left to puzzled officials of the Ministry of Works and the police are not consulted.

Around the palace walls technicians are testing new radar and television devices in the hope of raising the young Queen's present security to a still higher level. Inside the palace complacent officials murmur, "There is no need to tighten our precautions!"

CHARLIE CHAPLIN

SAD-FACED CLOWN

Charlie Chaplin's voice rose in anger. His hands trembled so violently that water spilled from his glass. Bitterly he said: "I don't want to create a revolution. I just want to create films." The great acting performance that the comic genius of the century had put on at a press conference aboard the Queen Elizabeth was over.

In calm tones, and turning on his famous toothy smile, he had made a superb attempt to conceal his shock at the sensational announcement that the government was considering banning his return to the United States.

Then the actor's mask suddenly came off. The smile became an angry frown. The soft voice became bitter.

"In these days of turmoil, froth and bitterness today is not the day of great artists," he said angrily. "Today is the day of politicians. People are only too willing to make issues about anything." Of the announcement about the possible ban, he said: "I can't understand. I am not political, but they have always tried to label me politician. I admit to only one thing—I am for the underdog."

Then came a question: Would Charlie return to England if there was a threat of being detained on Ellis Island when he went back to the U.S.? Before Charlie could reply a film company executive snapped: "Only a crystal ball could answer that one."

Charlie ended the interview with a sample of typical Chaplin irony.

"I am already working on a new film," he said. "The story is about a displaced person in New York and his tussle with the immigration authorities."

Why Movies Run Into Millions

Movie producers, accustomed to tossing about astronomical financial figures, shuddered a little when Samuel Goldwyn picked up the final bill for his production of "Hans Christian Andersen."

It came to $4,000,000.

For the benefit of those who couldn't understand how anything made out of celluloid could possibly cost so much money—even with Danny Kaye—Goldwyn revealed a few of the bills he ran up making the film version of the life of the famed Danish storyteller.

Talent—Kaye, Farley Granger and a new dancing discovery, Jeanmaire—and the cost of making the sets added up to a high figure and Goldwyn also found himself with bills like $14,500 for shoes.

The reason for the high shoe bill was that each member of a large troupe of ballet dancers wore out at least one pair of dancing slippers each day.

The company rehearsed more than 90 days and the shoes cost $10 a pair.

There was a little item of $1,000,000 for the story, although "Hans Christian Andersen" was an original story conceived by Goldwyn himself.

However, after the first version of the story was wriitten in 1937, 22 of Hollywood best—and most expensive—writers took cracks at improving it.

The playwright Moss Hart completed it in 1951.

A sprained ankle cost the studio another $30,000, principally because it happened to Jeanmaire and forced Goldwyn to suspend production for five days.

The most arresting item on the long bill reads: "Haircut, $1,000."

That went to eight-year-old Peter Votrian, who had to have his head shaved for the picture.

Leads Arion Singers During Golden Anniversary Season

By AUDREY ST.D. JOHNSON

Peter Copeland is a name that will not be familiar to many Victoria concertgoers, for he has only been in the city two years. Nevertheless, he is already conducting two local choral groups. Most significantly, he is the man who will lead the Arion Male Voice Chorus through its golden anniversary season this year.

Johnson

Mr. Copeland came to Victoria to retire, from Saskatoon, where he had spent 27 years as choirmaster of Grace United Church. He did not contemplate any active participation in music in his retirement, but the call came to take up the leadership of Centennial United Church Choir.

BACK IN HARNESS

Well, musicians and actors have a lot in common with what used to be said of the war horse—just give them a smell and they're off! So the Saskatoon conductor found himself back in harness almost before he could turn round.

With a big season ahead of him, rehearsing the Arion's special 60th year programs, Copeland took a sort of combined holiday-builder-upper, and visited the Edinburgh Festival.

While he traveled by car mostly, he believes he was one of the first Victorians to take advantage of the special nine-day rail ticket which allowed him to visit places and people he would never have seen otherwise. His general impressions were that the Old Country was a veritable garden and that people he met from all walks of life reflected a spirit of calm optimism.

"They are not grumbling," he says.

DAZZLED, IMPRESSED

But it was the Edinburgh International Festival of Music and Drama that absorbed Copeland's time and attention mostly. This was not his first visit. He attended the festival in 1950.

He was dazzled and impressed as all must surely be, by the great Tattoo, and speaks graphically of the five bands on foot and one on horseback, including three pipe bands, all led by the bandmaster of the Black Watch. In the floodlighting the uniforms were magnificent, he says. Just before "The Queen," they played Elgar's "Nimrod," arranged for massed bands, and the effect was overpoweringly stirring, he tells you.

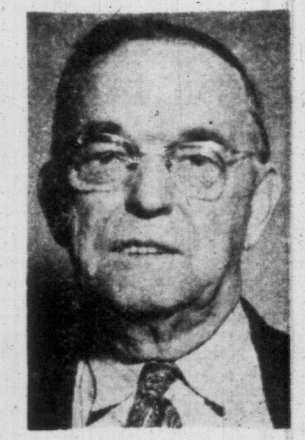
Sir Thomas Beecham, that thoroughly British conductor, has been ardently championing the English composer, Frederick Delius. Many of the composer's works have been programmed and recorded by the Royal Philharmonic Orchestra.

On one of the festival programs, the Philharmonic was joined by the Edinburgh Royal Choral Union, to present Delius' "Appalachia," notated as "Variations on an old slave song for orchestra and chorus."

This was written some years after Delius had left the Florida orange plantation whose singing workers had inspired it. Originally an orchestral conception, it is actually a tone-poem on the theme of love and separation.

The voices are added only to the 13th variation and as an epilogue, "as though the forces of Nature became articulate" according to Heseltine.

Says Copeland: "In my humble opinion, it was a waste of time for the chorus." And he adds that his opinion was shared by many others, including press critics.



PETER COPELAND

MANY INVITATIONS

Because of the distance he had traveled he received many favors and special courtesies. The Inauguration Service held in St. Giles' Cathedral is attended by an invited congregation. Three of the 1,500 reserved seats were allotted to the Canadian conductor.

The festival garden party at Lauriston Castle was another event to which he received special invitation. And it is the splendid bands, including the Black Watch military band, and the Scottish country dancing on the lawns, that he remembers best of his experience.

On his last night in London, Copeland attended a performance by London's Festival Ballet, under the direction of Anton Dolin.

After this he could almost have flown across the Atlantic on invisible wings. He was delighted, too, with the Royal Festival Hall, where the performance took place.

Seating 3,500, it is situated where once there were unsightly slums, opposite the Houses of Parliament. The Festival of Britain has passed into history, but this fine hall remains in the permanent possession of the English people.

Westminster hospital was the first of the volunteer hospitals that was founded as such and not derived from a religious institution.

It can therefore be expected that its archives contain an immense amount of unique historical material. In this vast accretion of human documentation is also an astounding record of the growth of surgical and medical science from the incredible ignorance and prejudice of the early days to the full status of today.

The official history of the Westminster hospital (1719-1948) has been written by John Langdon-Davies, and he builds up a fascinating story of facts, personalities, public and official attitudes, and humane disinterestedness, into an inspiring tribute of the great work that the hospital is now doing. John Murray published it last month.

Berkeley Square, Hay Hill, Hill Street, Dover Street, Stratton Street, Grafton Street, Albemarle Street, Bond Street are all names firmly linked with the history of London and associated with famous people and events.

The once great houses, Berkeley, Devonshire, Clarendon (afterwards Albemarle) and their estates, that gave them their names, are all gone, and Hay Hill is no longer rural.

John Murray, in association with the London Topographical Society, has published B. H. Johnson's fascinating researchs into the neighborhood, "Berkeley Square to Bond Street."

It is a book that will be of interest to all who love London. Throughout biography is blended with topography, and the illustrations include portraits of the Berkeley family of the 17th and 18th centuries not hitherto published.

New Version Interprets Difficult Bible Passages

By ARCHDEACON CONNELL

"Holy Bible, Revised Standard Version," prepared by 32 leading Bible scholars (Dent).

No book is so much wrapped up with the life and destiny of the English-speaking peoples as the Holy Bible. Translated from the Hebrew and Greek tongues into English the Great Bible was officially issued by the English bishops in 1539, but its general circulation was of later date.

Meanwhile it was ordered to be set up in churches "in some convenient place whereat the parishioners might most conveniently resort to the same and read it."

In those days of frequent illiteracy it was not unusual for some one person to read the sacred book to a body of hearers come together for that purpose.

A well-known picture shows us such a gathering in the Crypt of old St. Paul's, and we see the Bible chained to the wall or desk for its safe-keeping.

It was in those days of the Great Bible that the custom of regular and systematic reading of the Bible at the morning and evening services of the Church of England began, and the appointed lessons drawn up in 1549 continued in use until 1871 when a new table of lessons was ordered.

The effect of this upon the English language both written and spoken can hardly be exaggerated.

However, the English Bible underwent changes during its long association with readers and hearers. The Great Bible gave way to Parker's Bible in 1568 after two attempted revisions of the former.

This new translation was in use until 1611 in the reign of King James. Then our familiar Authorized Version, the work of 47 scholars chosen broadly from the clergy and universities, was issued in the reign of James the First of England and Sixth of Scotland.

SCRUPULOUS THOROUGHNESS

When one considers the period and its difficulties one cannot but be amazed at the scrupulous thoroughness of the translators and the amazing success they attained.

Not only has the Authorized Version of 1611 ministered to the religious needs of English-speaking people everywhere for nearly three centuries and a half but it has been the basis of the many translations into other tongues so remarkably exhibited in the work of the Bible Society. And more than that, the Authorized Bible has had in many ways a profound influence upon our literature and language. We see this not only in such a book as Bunyan's "Pilgrim's Progress," where indeed we can hardly do other than expect it, but in that ever delightful book of adventure "Robinson Crusoe," which owes its charm largely to the Biblical simplicity of its language and thought.

VERSIONS NOT AUTHORIZED

The Authorized Bible was revised in the nineteenth century, the New Testament in 1871 and the Old in 1885. These versions were never "authorized" as the 1611 Bible was, though they are occasionaly read in churches. The King James version holds its own, and it is doubtful whether any claim of greater accuracy of translation or even felicity of expression will entirely outweigh the hold the Book of so many generations has on our affections.

The newer translations, however, have their use in calling attention to meanings lost or forgotten through familiarity, and, of course, in the perhaps less common case of new light from old manuscripts and texts.

FOR CLEARER INSIGHT

Experience therefore does not suggest that any new version with whatever recommendations it may come will replace in public the familiar version with its associations and memories and familiar phraseology, but it will be found very useful in calling attention to forgotten or unappreciated points of emphasis, and, what is even more important in some respects, giving us a clearer insight into the Everlasting Truth that is embodied in the histories, biographies, poems and letters of the Old Book.

Thus a reference to the Revised Standard Edition will often throw light on a difficult passage or interpret what may appear a "dark saying." There is always something to learn, especially about a book with roots in ancient Hebrew and Chaldean history on the one hand, and in the Asia Minor and Syria of the early days of our era.

Hilarious Yarn of Advertising Agency

"The Quick Brown Fox," by Lawrence Schoonover, Macmillan.

Lawrence Schoonover, who used to be an advertising man himself, turns his historical remances to his old stamping ground for his new novel, "The Quick Brown Fox" (Macmillan). The scene is a big New York advertising agency and the principal characters are an art director who seems about to realize his ambition to become an account executive, his junior partner who operates on the theory that the end always justifies the means, and a model who loved too well. The novel reaches a hilarious, not to say hysterical, climax at the agency's annual Christmas party with the discovery of the art director and his unclad madel in the private office of the agency's president. That required a lot of explaining, especially since the discovery was made by the president himself and the head of a $2,000,000 account . . .

Reminiscences of Drummond in Engaging Book

The original "Bulldog Drummond," Gerard Fairlie, a commissioned officer in the Scots Guards, collaborated with his friend "Sapper" on the adventures of the famous fictional character. Now he has written a book of engaging reminiscences called "With Prejudice."

In the summer of 1919 when he was an officer of the guard at Windsor Castle he was catching up on his sleep one afternoon after a night of dancing. Coming off duty he had thrown off all his clothes and lain down stark naked on the top of the bed.

"I awakened," he writes, "to see that the door was open. I also saw Queen Mary standing in the doorway and staring at me open-mouthed. I seem to remember a scarlet lady-in-waiting dancing about behind her in an ecstasy of embarrassment.

"Queen Mary said nothing at all. "She turned quickly away, and the lady-in-waiting slammed the door behind her."

The story does not end here. Queen Mary delighted in inviting young officers up to dinner if they were not otherwise engaged. About three weeks later, Mr. Fairlie's turn came. "We were received with her usual graciousness," he continues, "and we were in turn introduced to her. When I came forward somebody started to present me. But Queen Mary cut him short. 'Oh, we know each other,' she said, and then, turning to me, laughed. I loved her from that moment, and I love her most respectfully still."

Mr. Fairlie writes of the miraculous escape of General De Gaulle. When that famous leader of the Free French forces entered Notre Dame Cathedral he was fired at by snipers from the organ loft. "From that range," he remarks, "it was inconceivable that they could miss, but miss they did. And this in spite of the fact that it was quite an appreciable time before the authorities could get at the enemy and suppress his fire. In the whole of this period the general never faltered, never even hesitated. He continued to walk up the aisle and . . . to greet his acquaintances on each side of him as he passed their pews."—P.C.

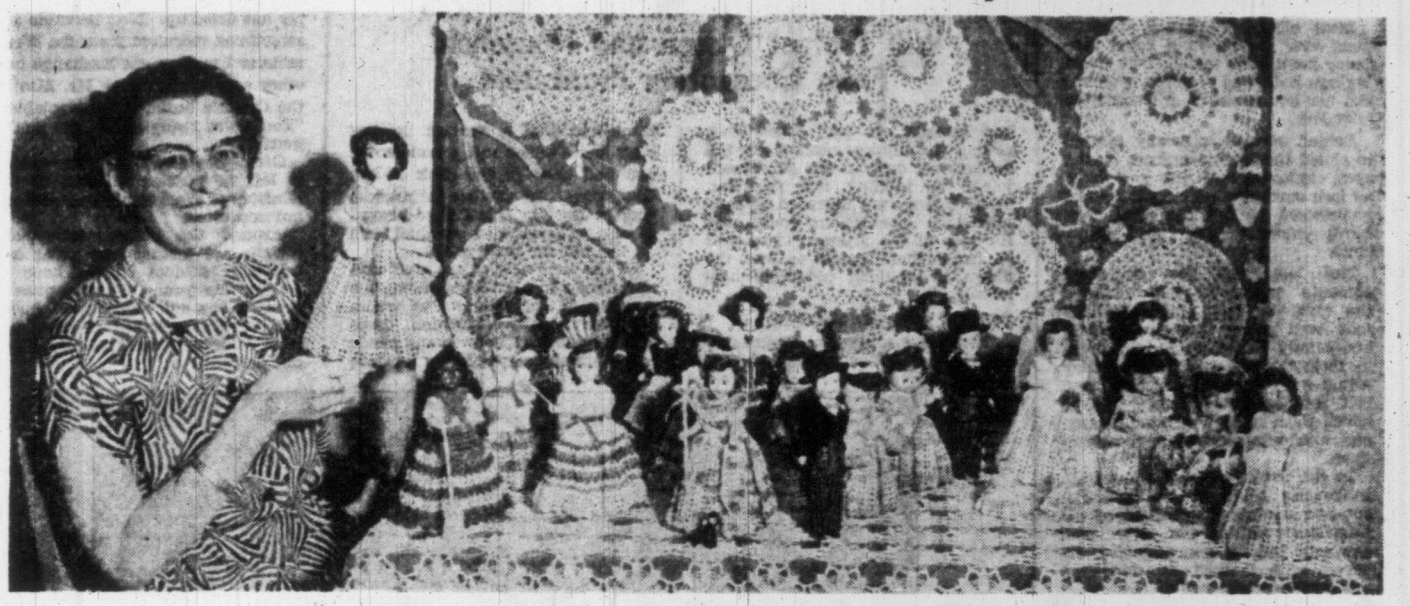
OFFICE WORKER'S HOBBY

Crocheted Tablecloth Has 269,648 Stitches



Dressing bridal parties and dolls of all nations is also a hobby of Miss Agnes Nicol.

BY RAY SIDAWAY

Although she has been crocheting clothing for dolls for only one year, Miss Agnes Nicol, 150 Douglas St., is adept at her hobby.

As you enter her suite, a table of dolls representing nearly every nation greets you. The dolls stand on a crocheted tablecloth, which Miss Nicol says took 269,648 stitches to make.

One of her most striking displays is a bridal party. This includes bridesmaids, the best man and the parents of the bride.

The bride herself is complete to the last detail; even a tiny diamond ring adorns her finger.

Some of the nations represented by her dolls are Ireland, United States, Netherlands, China, Latin America, and Italy. She also has plastic replicas of a mammy doll, Sambo and Bo Peep. These dolls stand about eight inches high and it takes about six hours to complete the garb for one.

Another one of her specialties is pettipoint pictures which adorn her walls with such scenes as sparrows, woodpeckers and a scene from an old American home which features the old rocking chair, spinning wheel, open fireplace and other items of an old colonial dwelling.

Miss Nicol was born in Winnipeg and has been in Victoria for about 15 years and is employed by the government in the motor vehicles branch.

MAKE-UP CUE

Complexion Is Color Guide

By ALICIA HART

To get the most from your make-up and clothes, you must first determine your complexion color.

You have three categories to choose from: yellow-tone (fair creamy skin ranging through darker shades of ivory and tan); pink - tone (fair and medium skins); neutral - tone (skins with little color or tending toward the olive type).

Once you have recognized your color category, you are ready to choose the fashion and make-up shades that will be most flattering.

Black, for instance, makes the skin look paler. So if you have little color, avoid this shade. You will look much lovelier in white and light colors.

On the other hand, if your skin has a great deal of color, just the opposite would hold true. Skin with a great deal of yellow should never wear bright blues which emphasize yellow.

If your skin is sallow, keep away fror red and purple tones. And if you wish to disguise shadows under your eyes or facial hollows, don't wear blues, violets or bright yellow-greens.

One of the best ways to test these colors against your skin is to experiment with swatches of material or colored paper. Then you can hold them up against your face, and see for yourself which ones are right for you.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

To bring up the pile after you have shampooed upholstery fabric, brush against the nap with a soft brush when the material is nearly dry. To shampoo, use a mild, cool, stiff lather, a stiff brush and a circular motion, working over a small area and taking care that the fabric does not get wet through. Scrape off suds, then wipe with a clean, damp sponge. Allow upholstery to dry thoroughly before using.

* * *

Clean soiled tatting by placing it on a flat surface and scrubbing it with a hand brush. This removes soiled spots without damaging the precious threads.

* * *

Every activity demands its own type of shoe. General and spectator sports shoes may serve a double purpose for walking and general utility wear.

* * *

To remove grease and oil stains from white cottons or linens, rub the stain well with soap or detergent before washing in hot sudsy water. If stain remains, sponge with carbon tetrachloride.

* * *

Safeguard your cups from chips and cracks by hanging them on hooks. If they must be stacked, never place more than one on top of another.

* * *

For most efficient cleaning with vacuum cleaner attachments, make sure all connections are tight. This prevents loss of suction.

* * *

If you have trouble with grease splashing on the wall behind the stove, avoid this difficulty by painting the area with a coat of colorless shellac. A wet rag will then remove grease spots at any time.

When, despite your vigilance, food burns to the bottom of a pan, be sure to let it cool to hand-touching temperature before you attempt to soak it in water. If doused with water when burning hot, metal is likely to warp, glassware or cast metal to break, and enameled-ware to chip. When the pan has cooled, let it soak for a half-hour or so, then loosen stuck-on food with a wooden spoon.

* * *

Unlined draperies need only hems turned all around. Make a narrow hem on the sides, but at least a three-inch heading at the top to allow room for a stitched slot to hold the rod, or for a reinforcing tape stitched to hold rings or hooks.

* * *

A small first-aid kit which can be purchased from a drugstore is a traveling necessity. Such a kit should always be carried in an automobile and on camping or hiking expeditions.

* * *

A washable plastic slip cover will keep your ironing board from getting dirty when not in use. The cover's elastic edge will keep soot from sifting in and you'll find it useful when sprinkling your laundry right on the board.

* * *

When you buy a coffee maker, look for one with a broad base so that it will stand firmly. Watch this especially in tall drip and vacuum types, which may be top heavy when there is water in the upper container.

* * *

The best recipe for keeping your sink drain clean and clear is to pour one tablespoon of an approved chemical drain cleaner down the outlet each week.

POSTURE BEGINNINGS

Baby's Body Needs Training

Posture care should begin soon after a baby is born. There is no time to lose if you want to insure strong shoulders and back, straight legs, a healthy foot structure and an over-all well-built body.

To get your baby off to a good start, she must have enough rest. Never skimp on her bedtime hours. It is important, too, that baby's crib have a spring and mattress that will give her body proper support.

Naturally, a well-balanced diet is an absolute necessity. No child can show fine physical development without the basic food staples recommended by your doctor.

If you notice the baby having any difficulty in breathing, have her checked by the doctor. Keep your youngster's needs under control at all times. They all affect her future growth.

Other good posture aids are to be found out-of-doors in the sunshine and fresh air. Strong bones demand the health-giving rays of the sun. This is true even in the winter.

Light apparel is also a requisite. Clothes that are too heavy tend to weigh down baby's shoulders and cramp an otherwise straight body.

After the bath, give baby a stimulating massage. Work on her arms and legs. Don't forget her feet. Massage will help to strengthen muscles and beautify the body contour.

If curtains shrouding a small window cut out too much of the light, or if a narrow window appears too insignificant to do justice to a room, try hanging your curtains or draperies on swinging side-arm brackets which hold the curtains well to the side of the window fram Removable curtain hooks are handy for hanging your draperies on the rods. By this trick you gain both additional light and increased importance from your window treatment.

Doctor Scrapped Practice for Farming

Government Dictation Led Englishman to More Congenial Life of Raising Poultry in Cowichan Valley

By C. V. FAULKNOR

"One lives longer being a farmer," said Dr. Eric Johnson of Westwood Poultry Farm, Duncan, who gave up a busy medical career in England in favor of a farm in the Cowichan Valley.

Faulknor

"You may have to get up the odd night to tend your chickens, but at least you don't have to travel far to do it," he says.

Eric Johnson practiced in the Midlands district, Derbyshire, for 18 years. During that time he served as police surgeon, also as medical officer for the Derby County Football Club. As a hobby the doctor raised dogs and chickens, the latter being raised via the battery system because of limited space in his town garden.

Soon after the outbreak of the Second World War the Johnsons sent their twin sons to St. Michael's School, Victoria, but stayed on in England themselves. Eric served eight shifts a week on army medical boards in addition to his regular practice. At war's end they emigrated to the United States, but after a 10-day stay headed north for Victoria.

MORE LIKE HOME

"It was more like home up here," Mrs. Johnson said. "The boys had told us so much about it."

One of their chief reasons for leaving England was socialized medicine, the doctor admitted frankly.

"When they started to tell me how to run my practice I figured it was time to move," he said. "Other reasons too, of course; there's lots of hunting and fishing here without encroaching on someone's property."

FOUR-THOUSAND HATCHERY

The Johnsons operate their farm chiefly as a hatchery. Their breeding flock of New Hampshires and White Plymouth Rocks numbers about 4,000 birds in an average year. Up to 100,000 day-old chicks are shipped annually to points on the island, mainland and prairies.

Dr. Johnson with two of his pedigreed English bulldogs. He still raises dogs as a hobby.

Poultry ranges at Westwood are on a three-year rotation plan, so that birds use each patch only once in three years. In the interim, sheep and goats are turned into unused ranges to keep them trimmed down.

Dr. Johnson is a board member of three agricultural bodies: the V.I. Poultry Co-operative Association, the Cowichan Creamery, and the Cowichan Agricultural Society.

"I go to more meetings here than I ever thought of in England," he smiled.

ARDENT VACCINATIONIST

Because of his medical background, Johnson was appointed Island representative on the Newcastle Disease Committee set up on the mainland when the disease was rampant a few years ago. The doctor is an ardent vaccinationist, as opposed to those who advocate slaughter of flocks to control the disease.

"We had some lively battles over the issue," he said. "But after all, one doesn't go around killing everyone who has smallpox."

Compensation is the chief stumbling block to the slaughter method, I learned. Two or three dollars a bird could never adequately repay breeders who had spent years building up high quality flocks.

Flock vaccination is now accepted practice. The serum first used was produced from "dead virus," and gave immunity for only a short time. "Live virus" serum now being used actually gives the birds a mild dose of the disease, but they recover and are immune for life.

First symptoms of Newcastle are similar to a cold in poultry, then some paralysis sets in, followed by death in severe cases. Mortality in older birds runs from 2% to 4%, but has reached 80% in younger ones. The latter feature is particularly hard on those who raise broiler fowl.

Newcastle disease is found all over the world now. Canada was one of the last countries to get it, although Dr. Johnson believes it was here years before, but unrecognized. Except for one or two isolated cases, the island has been remarkably free of this scourge to date, thanks, in part, to extreme vigilance.

GARDENING

By CECIL SOLLY

Expert Continues Advice on Care of Rhododendrons

This week Garden Expert Cecil Solly continued the advice started in last week's article on the care of rhododendrons.

"The ball should be so placed in the hole that the top roots are only an inch beneath the surrounding soil level, because rhododendrons are surface feeders. If the roots are placed too deep the foliage turns a sickly yellowish green, growth is poor, small flower trusses are produced and the plant ultimately dies from insufficient aeration of the root soil."

DRAINAGE

Where many gardeners frequently fail is in not providing sufficient soil drainage. With the continual watering that is necessary, there is a danger of stagnant water remaining in the soil about the root system. If the soil contains a sufficiency of sand and peat moss, or is properly porous, no harm can ever come from even excessive use of the sprinkler.

Rhododendrons are invariably found in rather poor soils where they grow wild, but always under conditions of good drainage. Inspection of "cuts" along the highway, where these shrubs are close to the road will show what conditions are necessary. However, in the garden where we grow all plants much better than Dame Nature does in the wild, there are many good garden practices that may be used to obtain sturdy, healthy plants that are just covered with large clusters of flowers every season.

The rhododendron is never found growing in a peat bog, although a few plants of the same family do well under this condition. They do, however, like the kind and measure of acidity provided by peat or crumbly old rotted wood, and that is why these are mixed with the soil when the shrubs are set out.

SHADE OR SUN

The rhododendron dell at Kew Gardens and the Rhodendron Glean at the University of Washington Arboretum in Seattle are splendid examples of the correct position for planting in respect to light. There, large masses of rhododendrons are planted along a broad path which curves through an avenue of deciduous and evergreen trees. The plants are located so that there is definitely no overhead shade, but trees give the necessary protection which only permits each plant to enjoy about four hours of direct sunlight.

Most gardeners are inclined to take the "experts" too seriously when they use the word shade. If the word "shelter," which means shelter from excessive sunshine and wind, were used, we would understand better.

Plants that are grown in a position where they get too much shade invariably are inclined to grow spindly.

Should there be any large trees near enough to the plants to reach out underground with their marauding, stifling roots, it would be wise to trace those roots back to the trees from which they emanate and to cut them off right at the tree.

Never just remove roots from the area in which any shrub is to be planted; they will only come back promptly again into the richly prepared soil. Even if the entire root is removed, it is likely to return in a few seasons, so, watch the rhododendron's leaves carefully. They are the best signpost that nature provides. Any sign of trouble should cause you to check first for the tree roots.

Quizzing the Gardener

Q—How late in the season should roses be sprayed?

A—Continue dusting or spraying roses against insects and diseases until cold weather sets in. Use an all-purpose mixture containing fermate. It is especially effective against black spot, a troublesome fungus disease nearly everywhere.

★ ★ ★

Q—How can we get rid of crickets and ants in the house?

A—A DDT will control household crickets. Spray with a 5 per cent solution around the baseboards, door sills and along the edges of the rugs. If ants are causing annoyance use a 2 per cent chlordane solution.

War Delayed Completion of Breakwater

British Firm Got $1,800,000 Contract for Stone Buttress to Tame Seas for Ships Docking in Harbor at Ogden Point

Guarding the entrance to Victoria harbor for forty years is the long grey stone breakwater at Ogden Point, stretching almost half a mile out in the ocean.

This sturdy bulwark against the sea consists of a concrete wall protected by massive grey blocks of granite weighing 20 tons each. These irregular blocks of stone were piled along the ocean side of the breakwater to protect the concrete from the constant action of the sea.

Laughlin

PROTECTING WHARVES AND SHIPPING

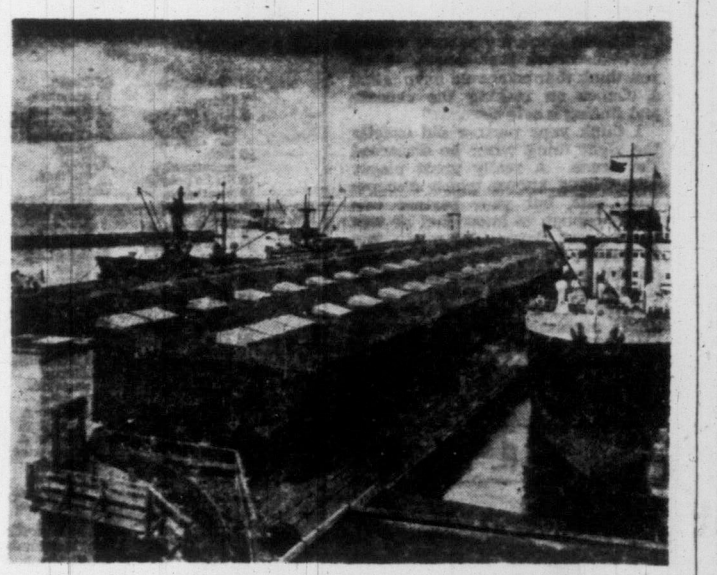
The building of the seawall was a project of vast importance designed to protect wharves and shipping against wind and tide.

At first there was much controversy regarding the choice of location for the breakwater—whether it should be built out from Ogden Point or Holland Point at the foot of Menzies Street.

Seafaring men were divided in their opinion and a thorough investigation regarding suitability of the site was made.

The pros and cons of both locations were fully discussed and the final decision—Ogden Point— was made by the government engineer, Louis Coste.

The $1,800,000 contract was let in October, 1912, to the British firm of Sir John Jackson.



Ogden Point Docks with breakwater in background.

Under the terms of the contract the sea wall was to extend 2,500 feet southwest out from Ogden Point and in 70 to 80 feet of water. The foundation was to be of rip rap surmounted by a concrete wall. Over 365,000 yards of rip rap quarried in the neighborhood were dumped to make the lower mound on which the wall was built. The extreme end of the breakwater was to be capped by a stone buttress on which a lighthouse was to be erected, shedding a warning light to mariners.

Four immense concrete piers were planned, spacious warehouses and modern cargo handling facilities, also a railway slip to be built to enable car ferries to load and unload at the dock. The piers were to measure 500, 700, 730 and 800 feet in length thus providing room for 20 of the world's largest seagoing vessels to dock at one time. The area of the outer harbor covers approximately three hundred acres of water at an average depth of thirty to eighty feet.

The work on the breakwater was to start almost immediately after the letting of the contract and employ a large number of men. It was estimated that construction would be completed in 36 months, that is in October of 1915. Owing to the outbreak of war in 1914, however, it was several years later before the project was completed.

SEA TAKES TOLL

Over the past forty years the boisterous sea, relentless in its might has hurled its restless force against the man-made sea wall and demanded its toll.

Many of the huge granite blocks protecting the breakwater have worn smooth by the action of the waves and shifted in position from the constant pounding of the heavy seas. Some of the blocks have dropped into deep water. Repair work will entail the lifting of these blocks with heavy equipment and placing them in position again.

Since its construction the sea wall has been a popular attraction. Besides its primary and essential use as a breakwater many a fishing enthusiast has passed patient hours with rod and line. Others find pleasure in the exhilarating sea breezes and bright sunshine while walking along its length.

Visitors when approaching Victoria by ship pass round the end of the breakwater and at night the red beacon light at the farthest end blinks a welcome to one and all.

LIEUT.-GOVERNORS AND WIVES

By N. DeBERTRAND LUGRIN

CHARLES BANKS, 'BRITISH COSMOPOLITAN'

It is one thing to write the stories of governors and their wives who are dead and gone, but quite another to try to deal with articles portraying the lives and the government house regimes of those who are happily still with us.

One must, when possible ask the co-operation of the latter which is not always easily done. This is the case of the Hon. Charles A. Banks and Mrs. Banks, who left a short time ago for an extended visit to the Old Country, and though we had a chat just before they left by plane, and Mrs. Banks very kindly wrote me air mail, I feel I cannot do justice to them and the good work they have done since they arrived in Victoria to make their home.

They came to Government House in 1946, shortly after the end of the second great war, when the world and poor England particularly were suffering the aftermath.

No one could leave the Old Country then, except on very important business. It was of course the question of sterling.

This meant that there were not many visitors to Government House from Europe, and there were few of the brilliant entertainments which marked the coming to Victoria of outstanding characters in previous regimes.

But there was one whose short stay will be long remembered.

That was the Archbishop of York, who visited the governor and his wife at the end of a long visit around the world.

HON. CHARLES A. BANKS AND MRS. BANKS

And Sir Norman Birkett was no less interesting as he had been attending the Nurenburg trials and had many a moving and dramatic tale to tell.

LOVED TO MEET PIONEERS

There were of course, the usual garden fetes at Government House and other social functions, and Mrs. Banks recalls the pleasure she and the governor had in meeting Victorians, especially the members of the pioneer families with whom she loved to chat about their memories of earlier days.

But most of all, Mrs. Banks admits, they enjoyed the entertainments and pleasure they could give to the members of the Institute for the Blind, the children from the Orphanage, the Crippled Children, and many others whose journey through life is handicapped who so warmly appreciate little kindnesses.

Hon. Charles Banks was born in New Zealand of English parents.

His business connections have been in all corners of the world.

He calls himself a British Cosmopolitan, and he has said he feels at home in all parts of the Commonwealth as well as in the United States. He is a Chief Boy Scout of the British Empire. He has an estate in Engalnd, consisting of 4,500 acres in the rolling country of Ayreshire, Scotland. He gave his services to Canada, during the war and took over all matters pertaining to munitions and supply.

Mrs. Banks is also something of a cosmopolitan and her interests are world-wide. She was born in France, her mother Scottish, her father a Frenchman. She is a delightful person to meet, broad minded, able to talk on any subject and with a keen and ready sense of humor. Like her husband she worked hard throughout the war, as so many women did, and afterwards in the remedial efforts following the end of hostilities.

Like Mrs. Nichol, Mrs. Banks loved gardening, and as soon as they were established at Government House, she turned her attention to adding further beauties to the surroundings. Victorians will remember that just in front of the entrance there used to be something of a wilderness with few touches of color. The governor's lady changed that as visitors may see for themselves. There are green sweeps of lawn, masses of flowers, and garden chairs and tables, making a happy little interlude in the sweeping shadow of the splendid trees.

CANASTA — JACOBY

Discarding Deuce Helped Here

"Please comment on the following play in Canasta," requests a San Francisco correspondent. "Both sides had melded after taking very small discard piles. Then the pack was frozen and just grew and grew until only three cards were left in the stock pile.

"My partner drew one of those three cards, which left only two more. This meant that this was probably his last chance to play, and he held the following cards:

A-K-Q-10-9-2

"Our side had melded four jacks and a pair of wild cards, so that my partner was tempted to add his deuce in order to complete the canasta. The trouble was that he didn't know which discard might be safe.

"He knew that nobody had melded or discarded any aces or kings, so that probably everybody at the table had a few aces and kings. There had been several discards and no melds in the other ranks (queens, tens and nines), but he wasn't sure how many of each had been thrown nor who had made these discards.

"He therefore discarded his deuce, knowing that it was the safest possible play. At the same time, of course, this discard gave up the canasta that he could have made.

"The next player drew and made a safe discard, and so did I. That ended the hand, and we didn't get our canasta. As it happened, my partner could have discarded a queen or a ten safely. A nine would have given the pack away, and an ace or king would have been equally fatal.

"Do you think my partner should have discarded that deuce, or do you think that he should have taken a chance on making the canasta and finding a safe discard?"

I think your partner did exactly the right thing when he discarded the deuce. A really great player might have known which discards were safe, but your partner was smart enough to know that he was not a great player. He might lose a fortune if he made the wrong discard, and couldn't lose very much if he simply played safe.

After all, the discard of the deuce didn't necessarily give up the canasta. His partner was still going to have a chance to play, and the canasta might still be completed at that time.

STAMPS — By R. NAIRNE

The Packet Trade

When a boy starts off his philatelic career by buying a packet of 1,000 different stamps he gets a much better bargain than he ever dreams of, for although the stamps themselves may not be worth more than the $1.35 they will cost him, he is getting probably $5.00 worth of labor thrown in for free.

If any other merchandise were put on the market with the selling price based entirely on the cost of material, with practically nothing allowed for cost of manufacture and assembling, the maker would find himself bankrupt in no time. Yet the makers of stamp packets continue in business for years, and apparently thrive in spite of their unorthodox pricing system. How do they do it?

The fact is that the business of selling packets of from 1,000 to 5,000 different stamps wholesale is dependent on two very opposite factors—charity and crime!

MISSION MIXTURE

In the first place charitable institutions the world over have managed to enlist thousands of willing workers all over the world, among stenographers and clerks in the big banking, mercantile and government offices, who for the good cause tear off and collect the stamps from the day's mail. When sufficiently large parcels have accumulated these are sent to the head offices in London and Paris. These stamps make up what is known as "mission mixture," and they are in turn sold to the packet makers, who actually buy them by the ton at an extremely low rate, made possible by their having cost nothing in the first place.

These stamps are still on the original bits of the envelopes they were stuck to, and are of course hopelessly mixed as to countries and denominations. One can imagine the amount of work it would be to sort and soak off these millions of stamps, and finally make them up into packets of 1,000 different! At present day labor rates, even in Europe, the cost would be prohibitive.

FOR TOBACCO MONEY

This is where the criminals take over. In the jails of Europe there are thousands of these men with nothing to do. To keep them occupied, and to give them a little tobacco money, they are set to sorting and cleaning the stamps for the packet makers. Hungary was the chief source for this service, but since that country has allied itself with the Communist regime it has been cut off from Western Europe, so the price of packets has gone up a bit.

However, there are plenty more jails elsewhere, and unfortunately always plenty of people to fill them, so until the world shows a very great improvement little Albert will still be able to get his packets at bargain rates.

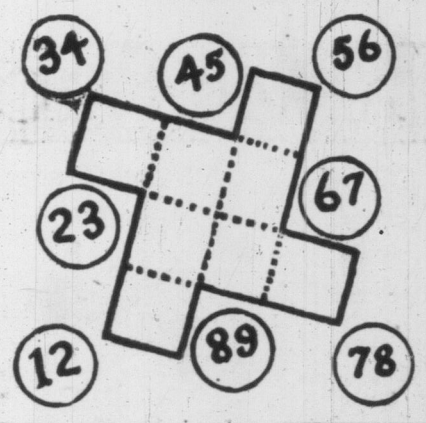
Put Three in a Row

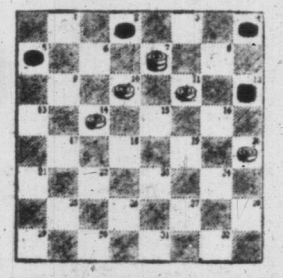


Transfer the numbers in the circles to the boxes, squares or cells so that the total of the three numbers in each row, horizontal or vertical, will equal 135. You may find it easier to solve if you cut out the numbers and switch them around to meet the requirement.

Solution: One arrangement reading horizontally is: Top—56; second row—78, 34, 23; third row—12, 67, 89; bottom—89, 45, 12. Other solutions may have a different arrangement in the centre; however, the numbers in a row will be the same but in a different position.

Your Move to Win

White eliminates his opponent in four short moves. See if you can turn the trick with the finesse of master checker player, Millard Hopper, who originated this problem. White to move and win. (White moves upboard).



Answer: White moves 10-6 Black jumps 2-18, then White moves 20-16 Black jumps 25-18. Continue: 11-8, 4-11, 7-14. White wins.

Reviewing the Records

BY DELOS SMITH

It is the fashion these days to promote artists with multiple records, and Robert Goldsand, pianist, is the newest beneficiary. Concert Hall has issued four LP's of his playing.

One is Liszt's six Paganini etudes combined with Rachmaninoff's variation on a Chopin theme. Another pairs Brahms' variations on a Paganini theme and Schumann's F minor sonata. The other two are devoted to Schubert — the eight impromtus on one, and the A major sonata, Opus 120, plus the six Moments Musicaux on the other.

You're attracted to this interpreter irresistibly—and as an interpreter rather than as a technician, even though he plays the grandiloquent Liszt with easy-breathing security. But he draws a recognizably characteristic essence from the Brahms, from the Rachanminoff, from the Schumann and, above all, from the Schubert.

SHOWING OFF WITH STRAUSS

He shows the all-too-rare aesthetic good sense of accepting Schubert's piano music in entirely Schubertian terms, just as though Beethoven never had existed. You have to go to Schnabel for the same interpretive wholeness. Schubert was a much greater composer for the piano than most pianists permit him to be. This statement, the reviewer believes, is proven by Goldsand.

Leonard Pennario, another pianist and a young one of great potentials, has a new record which will be a blank for some listeners because it is devoted to displaying piano playing as a form of acrobatics. Strauss' Blue Danube and Emperor Waltzes are arranged to encompass at least one flourish, elongated trill, or hand-spring per bar. If you enjoy virtuoso though empty playing, you'll go for this dish (Capitol; 12-inch LP).

Columbia has a complete run-through of the vocal numbers of Lehar's "The Merry Widow" with Dorothy Kirsten and Robert Rounseville in the top roles and an excellent supporting cast and a chorus and orchestra under Lehmann Engel. It's uncommonly well done, even to it being sung in English of sound meter and meaning.

Those who dismiss "The Creatures of Prometheus" as "early" Beethoven has listened to the master's ballet score too attentively. It's a fascinating score of typically Beethovenesque substances, some premonitory, some full blown. A recording by the London Philharmonic under von Beinum is of a lively and well measured performance although the score has been cut (London; 12-inch LP).

BETWEEN TIMES

By MONTE ROBERTS

I have always had a great deal of respect for the University of British Columbia, despite the fact I ain't never been to college.

But now my respect has re-doubled, because of a very smart promotion scheme, dreamed up to increase donations to the Red Cross blood bank.

U.B.C. claims it is the most red-blooded college in Canada, and points with pride to 1,425 pints as proof.

The university is not resting on its laurels as it waits for challengers.

It is out for blood, and no fooling.

Note to Mrs. E. Wills, energetic publicity lady for the I.O.F.: Sorry, Between Times never gives plugs for such things as the I.O.F. Talent Concert tonight at Victoria High School. Even if it is all local talent, and the proceeds go to worthy charities, I can't possibly mention in this space that tickets are only $1.00 and the concert starts at 8 p.m..

Hope it is a success, though.

Thanks to the unknown Rotarian who passed the following along:

A sufferer who lives close to a railroad yard in the suburbs wrote the following to the railroad company complaining about the racket made by a switch engine:

"Gentlemen: Why is it that your switch engine has to ding and dong and fizz and spit and bang and hiss and pant and grate and grind and puff and bump and chug and hoot and toot and whistle and wheeze and jar and jerk and howl and snarl and puff and growl and thump and boom and clash and jolt and screech and snort and snarl and slam and throb and roar and rattle and yell and smoke and smell and shriek like hell, all night long?

Gad, I wish I had written that!

A woman who reported she had shot a man was only joking. But another woman, who was afraid her husband was going to shoot her early today, was not.

The two alarms came to city police almost simultaneously.

Officers bundled into cars and sped to the spots indicated. But investigation showed that in the first instance the woman who claimed to have shot a man had dreamed it all.

Meanwhile, in another section of town, police officers found a husband with a revolver in his hand and a frightened wife waiting for them

They took the gun away and sent the man to bed.

He had been drinking.

So had the woman who reported she had shot a man.

Rudy Moyer of Kelowna will represent British Columbia in the contest for the T. Eaton Scholarship at the coming Royal Winter Fair in Toronto, Agriculture Minister Kenneth Kiernan announced today.

Each province enters a student in the contest. The scholarship will defray, to a large extent, the winner's expenses in securing a degree at the university of his choice.

Provincial representatives are chosen for such things as knowledge of agriculture, public speaking ability and general scholastic record.

Campbell River village commissioners said today they were prepared to call for tenders immediately for construction of a flood gate to keep high tides from swamping the lower reaches of Elm Street.

Governor-General Sacrificed Rest To Visit Veterans

It was revealed today that Canada's Governor-General Vincent Massey, sacrificed a precious hour of rest, after a wearying day of public appearances, to visit war veteran hospital patients here Thursday.

E. G. Drage, administrator of the D.V.A. veterans' hospital said the visit came as "a pleasant surprise." The patients, appreciative of the fact that Mr. Massey was weakened by a throat affliction, gave him a warm welcome.

His Excellency, who requested the visit personally, was greeted by Stan Okell, assistant district administrator for the Vancouver Island division of the D.V.A. Mr. Okell presented Dr. C. A. Watson, hospital medical superintendent, Mr. Drage and Assistant Matron, Miss Jean Purves.

Taken direct to the wards, Mr. Massey greeted and shook hands with every patient.

Governor to Board Sioux at Nanaimo For Coast Cruise

The destroyer Sioux will leave her Esquimalt base at 9 a.m. Sunday for Nanaimo, where she will take aboard Governor-General Vincent Massey, now completing his Vancouver Island visit with a few days of quiet at Qualicum Beach.

The Governor-General went to Qualicum Friday at the invitation of B.C. lumber baron H. R. MacMillan. He is staying on Mr. MacMillan's summer estate.

The Sioux is scheduled to leave Nanaimo at 8.30 p.m. Sunday. It is to take the distinguished visitor to historic Nootka, on the Island's west coast, then on to Mackenzie Rock, where there is a monument to the early explorer, and then to Prince Rupert.

The Governor-General will leave the ship at Prince Rupert, proceeding to Prince George and thence by train to Jasper.

The Sioux will return to Esquimalt at 9 a.m. Oct. 25.

No Forest Inquiry This Year

Bennett and Sloan Unable to Agree?

The provincial government has abandoned plans — for this year at least—to name Chief Justice Gordon Sloan as a royal commissioner to delve once again into forestry policy in British Columbia.

An authoritative source said today Premier W. A. C. Bennett and the chief justice could not come to an agreement on the nature of the inquiry, and the idea has now been dropped.

The premier, it is understood, was thinking in terms of a short enquiry when he asked Chief Justice Sloan to act. Premier Bennett wanted the probe to deal mainly with troublesome aspects of the forest management plan.

Chief Justice Sloan, it is said, was not interested in undertaking the limited task. He felt the job wouldn't be worthwhile doing —or necessary—unless he could investigate all phases of forest policy as he has done previously.

This might have taken two years, and from a political viewpoint was distasteful to the government which wants some definite action on the contentious issue before the election next year.

Reasons the proposal has been dropped appear twofold:

1. Appointment of a royal commission enquiry which would take two years to complete, would leave the government open to criticism that it was sidestepping the issue.

2. The government's hands would be tied once the enquiry started. It couldn't make changes while the probe was under way.

Consequently, the government now is expected to tackle some phases of the problem itself, and thus be able to point out to the forest management plan's critics some definite improvements taken by the new administration.

If the Social Credit government is returned to power next year, then will be the opportune time to appoint a royal commission to enquire into all phases of forest policy.

No Birds . . . But They're Hoping

Up to 10 a.m. today this group hunting Saanich farmlands for pheasants had scored a "duck egg." But they were hoping to get at least a couple of birds in the noon hour. Annual open season on pheasants started in this area shortly before daybreak this morning. Left to right, the hunters are: Bill Jackson, 4546 East Saanich Road; Harold Luney, Royal Oak P.O., and Bob Heal, Royal Oak P.O., nephew of Charles Heal, after whom the West Saanich rifle range was named. SEES BOOM FOR BARMEN

Drink Mixer Mustn't Miss Or Finicky Patrons Fuss

In anticipation of a change in provincial liquor laws which will permit the sale of spirits in cocktail bars, a 28-year-old Victorian is planning to give a six-weeks' course in bartending, catering and waiting.

The instructor is dark-haired Wally Wyon, presently engaged as a waiter in a large local restaurant. Mr. Wyon, who took a similar course in New York several years ago, believes that if the liquor laws are changed "bartending" will become an important trade in British Columbia.

Practical demonstrations in the mixing of cocktails and the identification of wines by taste is included in the course, he said.

The bartender said there will be a limit to the spirit-tasting tests. Students will be allowed only light sips, he explained.

JOBS IN PROSPECT

Mr. Wyon is of the opinion that if the liquor laws are changed about 150 bartenders will be required almost at once on Vancouver Island. This does not include the demand for additional waiters and caterers, he said.

"You can't be a bartender just like that," he said, snapping his fingers. "Bartending is an art and you have to know the names of hundreds of wines and spirits."

He said one of the chores of a bartender is remembering orders. A wrong cocktail mean't the drink was wasted.

"If a bartender mixes a wrong cocktail he must either pour the drink down the sink or drink it himself," he said. "As you can see he can't afford to make too many mistakes."

Mr. Wyon said waiting and catering also called for training and are important from the sales point of view.

There are not many good waiters on Vancouver Island," he said, "and good waiters will be in great demand if wines are sold in restaurants."

His course will be open to both men and women.

Local Horsemen Entered In Cobble Hill Trials

Well-known Victoria horsemen will join residents of the Cowichan Valley Sunday to see and participate in the Madronas Hunter Trials and Western Pony Races.

They will be held at "Madronas," the Cobble Hill estate of Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Jackson.

Sheila Olson, prominent young Victoria rider is pictured holding ribbons and trophies which will be awarded winners.

Events are sponsored by the Cowichan District Riding Club under patronage of His Honor Lieutenant-Governor Clarence Wallace. The band of H.M.C.S. Naden will be in attendance.

The entire proceeds are for the Solarium.

There will be eight events in all, starting at 11 a.m., with the Green Hunters Class and Handy Hunters Class held in the forenoon.

Other events are: Western Glamour Class, Western Pony Express Race, Open Working Hunter — main class of the day, Western Quarter-mile race, Pair of Hunters over Jumps and Western Stake Race.

Among Victoria riders participating will be Jack Simpson, Nick Bandon, Howard Donegan, Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Carpenter, Capt. J. D. Prentice and Miss Ann Cavenagh.

Highway Accident Total Climbing To Dizzy Heights

British Columbia's highway accident toll continues to climb dizzily.

The motor-vehicle branch reported today during the first eight months of 1952 that 12,470 highway crashes killed 119 persons, injured 4,202 persons and resulted in property damage totalling $3,671,442.

In the same period last year, there were 11,717 accidents, 118 deaths, 3,945 injuries and $3,166,373 property damage.

To the end of August this year 299,269 motor vehicles were licensed to use the highways, compared with 275,283 in the same period in 1951.

Drought-Dry Saanich Wells Stir Fear of Fire

Salmon Fishing Stopped to Help Spawning

Fire hazards and general inconvenience in surrounding rural areas are increasing as the result of the drying up of a large number of farm wells, streams and brooks due to of the most unusual fall droughts ever to occur on South Vancouver Island.

With the exception of deep wells sunk to the depth of underground streams, the majority of wells in farming areas are dried up or contain less than a foot of water, provincial agricultural officials reported.

Some wells dried up as early as the beginning of September, they said.

The situation is further aggravated by the drying up of streams and brooks which usually are a source of water supply in emergencies.

Many farmers are concerned with the situation. They have now no means of combatting fires.

HAUL FOR MILE

Some growers have to travel over a mile to obtain water from neighbors or from streams which have not yet completely dried up.

Meanwhile, the Provincial Game Department continued to save thousands of trout in danger of dying in streams and brooks of Saanich.

Inspector George Stevenson reported that his department so far has taken out 11,000 cutthroat trout from pools in Saanich streams, no longer flowing. The trout have been released in lakes or in streams with sufficient water, he said.

Game officials said the drought will undoubtedly affect next year the number of sport fish in Saanich waters. The drought has already killed many fish, they added.

FISHING STOPPED

The drought is also endangering the spawning of salmon stocks and has resulted in the Federal Fisheries Department closing fishing grounds off the West Coast of Vancouver Island and northern British Columbia.

Fisheries officials explained that salmon are not able to get to their spawning beds due to the drying up of rivers and streams which normally are fairly high at this time of the year.

In several bays, fisheries officials said, thousands of salmon are circling about waiting for the water level of the rivers to rise.

To protect the salmon from poachers, they said fisheries guardians have been posted at the mouth of important rivers and streams. Heavy poaching would result in a serious depletion in salmon stocks, they added.

The lack of rain is also causing the level of lakes to drop but not sufficiently yet to affect generation of electric power, it was reported.

TINDER-DRY WOODS CALL FOR PUBLIC'S CAUTION

The B.C. Forest Service today warned Vancouver Island residents to exercise extreme caution in the forests over the week-end.

Officials said the fire hazard is still high and the weather will remain dry for at least another two or three days.

There are now eight fires in the Langford district, two new ones occuring in the last 24 hours. There are 48 men and two bulldozers fighting the blazes.

Of the 50 fires burning in B.C., 39 of them are in the Vancouver Forest District, which includes Vancouver Island.

Burglar Hauls Liquor, Cash From Elks' Home

Householder Reports Futile Attempts Of Entry by Breaking Windows

A burglar escaped with a dozen bottles of mixed liquors Friday night when he broke into the Elks' Home, 732 Cormorant Street.

He took also a charity cash box from the office containing $50 to $60 and about 20 packages of cigarettes, city police reported.

In his haste, the culprit dropped three large bottles of liquor on the front steps, which were found this morning by the caretaker.

Entry was gained by an unlocked window on the west side of the building by a fire escape.

ATTEMPTED ENTRY

Mrs. S. Fraser, 1853 Fern, reported to police this morning that an attempt had been made to enter her home during the night.

The burglar had endeavored to get in the kitchen window by trying to remove the window pane with a screw driver. He also broke a rear basement window in his attempt to get into the house. Police said no entry was made.

Religion in Plays Theme of Lecture Of U.B.C. Speaker

A lecture designed to interest members of theatre groups in Victoria will be given by Dorothy Somerset, assistant professor, Department of English, University of British Columbia, who will speak on Monday at 8.15 p.m. at the Victoria College - Normal School auditorium.

The lecture, sponsored by the University Extension Association of Victoria, will deal with the trend of many playwrights today to bring religion into plays.

Miss Somerset is of the opinion there is nothing comparable to the present trend since the middle ages and the days of the Greek theatre. She will try to analyze why playwrights in the middle of the 20th century are turning back to the question of God.

3-Car Crash Brings Triple Court Clash

A three-car, accordion-style accident, in which the real culprit got away, concerned B.C. Court of Appeal Friday.

The court dismissed appeal by Phil Poulin, a Coquitlam milkman, who was seeking $302.72 from either A. C. Powell, of Mission, or C. T. Rouse, of Maple Ridge. The court allowed, however, a cross-appeal by the respondents, who wanted court costs, which had been denied them by Judge H. J. Sullivan, who heard Poulin's claim in New Westminster's County Court, and who threw out the claim without awarding costs.

The three litigants were involved in an accident Oct. 9, 1950 on the Trans-Canada Highway near Abbotsford. They were driving behind one another in a long line of cars and piled up when the line came to a sudden stop.

Poulin's car was hit by Powell's and his, in turn, was hit by Rouse's.

In dismissing the claim in the court below, Judge Sullivan held that the person responsible was the driver of the car at the head of the line. The judge offered this interesting comment:

"One has no evidence to support the opinion but can quite easily imagine the driver of car No. 1 to have been the type of busy business man of the age of 17 years or less, out for the evening with the girl friend for a well-earned bit of relaxation, whom one encounters from time to time upon the highways of this province."

VICTORIA MISSED ON 'LIFE'S' MAP

George Warren Miffed, Protests

City publicity commissioner George I. Warren is "burning" because Victoria is not on the map.

The huge, mass circulation Life Magazine has published a map of Canada without Victoria.

As if the wound were not deep enough, points out Mr. Warren, Life's map of Canada lists Vancouver, Calgary, Edmonton and scores of other Canadian cities.

Mr. Warren said he dustied off a protest wire to Life's managing editor, Edward K. Thompson today.

The wire read: "Congratulations on your Canada story. We appreciate your article designed to emphasize extraordinary industrial developments. But in view of space given to Kitimat and British Columbia projects our citizens feel it unfortunate that Victoria was omitted from boom, land map and that no mention was made of the fact probably entire negotiations were entered into and concluded with provincial government heads here in Victoria, capital city and seat of government. They feel your writer might have mentioned the huge lumbering, pulp and power developments on Vancouver Island in past three years."

Officer Tells How He Found Buried 'Loot'

City detective Angus Munro described to an Assize Court jury Friday how he found a red tool box hidden in a compost heap in the garden of John Douglas Lemarchand, 3919 Winton Street.

Munro told of searching the garden while fellow detectives Louis Callan and Norman Bath searched the basement of Lemarchand's home. He said he found the tools, which were exhibited in court and identified as the property of Roy Baker, 3470 Bowker, underneath a pile of grass cuttings.

Lemarchand is charged with stealing, receiving and retaining the tools.

Presentation of Crown and defense evidence was completed before court adjourned Friday afternoon.

On Monday, Crown counsel Gordon Cameron and defense counsel George Gregory will deliver their final summaries to the jury. The 12-man panel is expected to retire to consider a verdict Monday afternoon after it is charged by Mr. Justice A. D. Macfarlane.

A PREVIEW FOR CONCERT-GOERS

By AUDREY St.D. JOHNSON

I have a theory that authors love to tease audiences with the names they tack onto their plays: "Come Back, Little Sheba," and "Three-Cornered Moon," are examples.

Nobody, however, does it better than Tennessee Williams. He adores such alliterative titles as "Lady of Larkspur Lotion," for example. But "Glass Menagerie," as such things go, is fairly simple, and certainly intriguing.

Its meaning is both philosophic and symbolic, but if you want to know more about it, you'll have to visit St. Lukes' Parish Hall, Monday or Tuesday. From there, you can figure it out for yourself.

That vigorous group, St. Lukes' Players, have taken on Williams' elusive, tender play and whether or not you come away with the glass menagerie in your pocket, you will not leave empty-minded

Victoria High School auditorium may be a long way from Town Hall in New York, but on Wednesday, an artist will present a program that he played less than a week ago in that famous place.

Randolph Hokanson comes with good words from the metropolitan critics, to open the Victoria Musical Art Society season.

It strikes me as the completion of a full circle that Hokanson, who received encouragement and support in his student days locally and at the hands of a former musical club president, should now help to fill the student bursary coffers of the Musical Art Society.

THE JAZZ SOCIETY—No tellin' about the private lives of some people. You see a guy who's a sedate chartered accountant and figure maybe he collects stamps or butterflies as an off-business-hour hobby. Then it sort of staggers you when you find him leaping around some evening in a leopard skin doing some high and fancy adagio dancing. Actually I once knew one of the best little mitt slingers in Canada who used to like nothing better than bending over stoves baking cakes come spare evenings.

You take our paper's assistant sports editor, Mr. Denny Boyd. Now there's a guy who'll quote you statistics on hockey, football, baseball, the fight game until the cows come home. He's either trundling in and out of the office all set for a football game or a round of golf. But what does he start talking about to me just yesterday—jazz!

Who'd a thunk it — our nice, clean, outdoorsy, fair-haired Denny, president of the Victoria Jazz Society no less. What a line-up, he breathes. He lists 'em off as though they were all—Americans—Bill Heybroek, A tenor sax; Vic Keating, trumpet; Ray Petch, piano; Mike Pretty, drums, and Claire Anderson, bass.

A fanatic light comes into Denny's eyes as he tells me how these chums of his meet in the auditorium of the Naval Veterans, Broad Street, and of how the Jazz Society is going to hold its second concert Monday night, starting at 8.

Trumpetman Keating he enthuses, has just returned from studying in New York and he's got a style as distinctive as from here to there. Petch he says is a second Oscar Peterson; Pretty as a drummer is 'tasty, and learned to play in England while Anderson used to play with the Continentals currently touring the U.S.

For a guy who talks the line of sports he does, Denny suddenly speaks a foreign tongue. "Igor Stravinski," he tells me, "said jazz is an integral part of the North American cultural pattern and is a vital part of its folklore." Then our little Whiteman incognito tells me all about jazz having its origin in and around New Orleans near the turn of the century and of how the early "blues" was a musical protest against slavery and poverty which was the colored man's lot.

Mr. Boyd's eyes go hot and smokey like a Louis Armstrong trumpet. He talks of fabulous Storyville, a sector in New Orleans composed of bars, taverns, dance halls and houses of ill repute and of how the musicians took to river boats of the Mississippi to spread the jazz influence over the length and breadth of North America.

He started spouting about early jazz pioneers, of men like King Oliver, Jelly-roll Morton, Bix Beiderbeck, Armstrong, Ellington and Goodman. There was no let up.

"Denny," I said hoarsely, "I gotta go now or I'll be missing the kick-off—but I'll see you next Monday at the Naval Veterans auditorium on Broad at 8."

But he is still talking.

Frontiersmen Get Charter, Basic C.D. Training Complete

Members of the Legion of Frontiersmen in Victoria have completed their basic training in civil defense and have been awarded their charter, city defense headquarters announced Friday.

In time of emergency, the group would be employed as an auxiliary by the police department, operating meantime as an arm of civil defense, under Victoria director, Leonard G. Hatcher.

Election of officers, held Friday, saw the following named: Officer Commanding, A. H. Davies; adjutant, A. Saunders; sergeant-major (1st class), G. McLeverney; quartermaster, C. Martin.

Fake Paintings Subject of Talk

A lecture of "Fakes" will be given in the Arts Centre of Greater Victoria, Oct. 24, by prominent restorer of paintings, Walter Jeune.

Colin Graham, curator, announced Friday the talk, scheduled for 8 p.m., will serve to expose methods employed by unscrupulous art dealers to disguise mass-produced prints as old originals.

This practice has enabled cheats to sell 15c prints for large sums of money and involves such methods of baking newly coated prints in an oven until the surface attains an aged look. Mr. Graham has a few fakes on hand for comparison.

Needs Rest for Eyes

THE HAGUE, Oct. 18 (Reuters)—Prime Minister Eamon De Valera of the Republic of Ireland will return to Dublin Tuesday after treatment, at Utrecht eye hospital, the Irish legation announced today.

"While it is expected that the improvement in his sight will be progressive, a period of rest will be necessary," a statement said.

●● NOTHER NEWIE

A songster who has been making his presence felt for these past few years is Denny Vaughan.

Mr. V. has turned out several good records in the past while, at the same time, making appearances in TV and on the air south of the border.

He is, however, a Canadian artist who made quite a name for himself in Canada before going south.

He will be remembered as one of the big names in the Army Show of several years ago.

Now he comes back to the Canadian airways over a long list of radio outlets north of the 49th.

That figure of speech, we have just realized, is rather inept, because Denny will be heard on CKDA, and we are one of the few Canadian stations lying south of the 49th.

Backed up by a stellar crew of other Canadian talent, "The Denny Vaughan Show" will appear in the CKDA schedule for the first time on Monday, and will be heard every night, Monday through Friday, at 8.30, for the next many, many months.

●● NIGHTSIDE

The addition of the "Denny Vaughan Show" to the CKDA night-time schedule greatly enhances the listener-appeal of CKDA's mid-evening radio-fare.

Starting at 8.00 p.m., you may take in the latest news with

SID LANCASTER

At 8.10, you have the "story behind the news"—the nightly news-commentary featuring CKDA's news editor

DON WILSON

The commentary is followed by one of the most popular features on the station.

That's "Tel-Opinion," during which the listener is invited to air his opinion, via telephone and over the air, on subjects in great variety, of general public interest.

"Tel-Opinion" is handled by

ED. FAREY

At 8.30, from now on, of course, comes "The Denny Vaughan Show," to be followed by a series of quarter-hour musicals which vary in theme from night to night.

That brings us to the next hourly newscast, from 9.00 to 9.05 p.m., after which comes

. . . with his "Treasure Chest of Melody."

Except . . .

Except for those nights when the Victoria Cougars are booked for an away game, in which case you'll get

BILL STEPHENSON

Arrangements have just been made for Sportscaster Stephenson to bring Victorians a slash-by-trip account of all the away games this season and . . .

. . . the next hockey broadcast is scheduled for tonight at 9.05. REMEMBER . . .

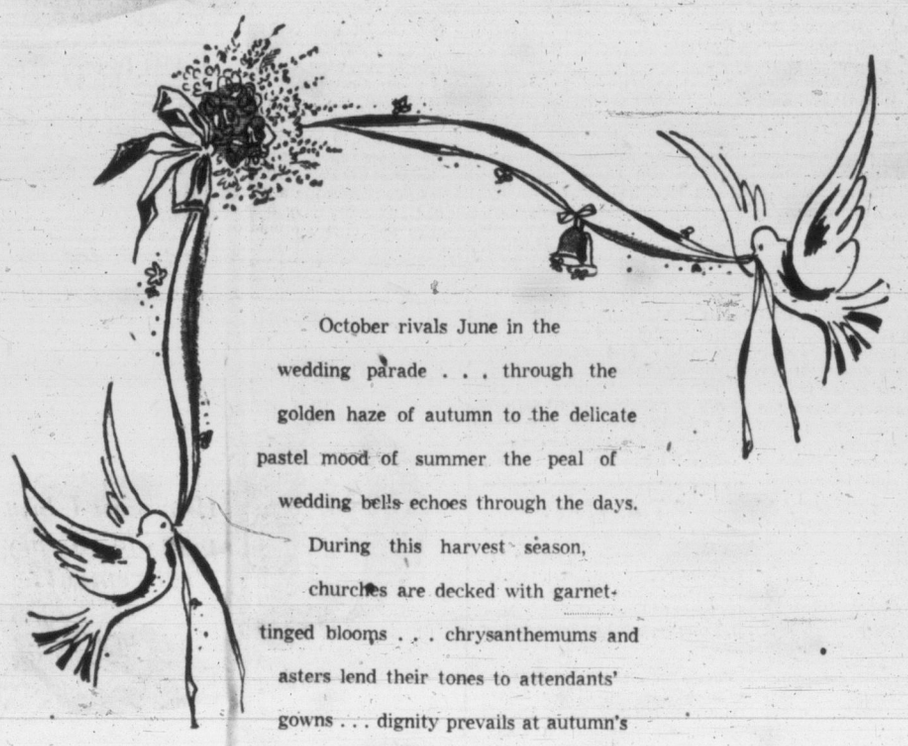
Women



October rivals June in the wedding parade . . . through the golden haze of autumn to the delicate pastel mood of summer the peal of wedding bells echoes through the days. During this harvest season, churches are decked with garnet-tinged blooms . . . chrysanthemums and asters lend their tones to attendants' gowns . . . dignity prevails at autumn's nuptial service.

Canon George Biddle officiated at the recent nuptial service in St. John's Anglican Church, which united Amy Norah Farmer, daughter of Mrs. W. R. Farmer, Kisber Avenue, and Hugh Clennell Wilkinson, only son of Mrs. Hester Wilkinson, Tattersal Drive, and late Mr. W. E. Wilkinson. (Photo by Joncas.)

Chapel of Royal Jubilee Hospital was scene of recent nuptial service which united Geraldine Anne, younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Duncan K. Kennedy, St. Charles Street, and John William, younger son of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert D. Irwin, Shoal Harbor, Sidney. Rev. Moir A. J. Waters officiated. (Photo by Goertz.)

Arranged By DAWN VAN NORMAN
Women's Department

Following a honeymoon in Seattle and other points in Washington, Mr. and Mrs. John Arthur Lanigan will go to Vancouver to make their home. The couple were married at a recent service in St. Mary's Church, Oak Bay, with Archdeacon A. E. de L Nunns officiating. The bride is the former Doreen Agnes Seney, R.N., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. Seney, Peterborough, Ont., and the groom is the son of Mrs. A. G. Lanigan, Granite Street, and late Dr. Lanigan. (Photo by Joncas.)

An attractive autumn bride was Frances Mickaela Ciceri, who exchanged nuptial vows with Robert Allan Husband at a recent ceremony in Fairfield United Church. Rev. William Allan officiated for the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Reginald E. Ciceri, Yates Street, and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Husband, McKenzie Street. (Photo by Joncas.)

An October wedding of interest was performed recently in Oak Bay United Church when Rev. T. G. Griffiths heard the nuptial vows exchanged by Shirley Cecilia Campbell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Campbell, Cultus Lake, and Robert Gerald Whysker, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. Whysker, Foul Bay Road. (Photo by Jus-Rite.)

SHOPPING GUIDE

Your Dress Form 'Double' Is in Town Right Now!

By PENNY SAVER

You have a "double" in town. She is waiting to be created to look exactly like you. She will model as your stand-in for fitting your new fall or winter dress or suit. She is a dress form.

She has been "doubling" for so many Canadian home dressmakers, and was so popular, in the few cities she first visited in Canada this spring, that she has come to this city to "double" for you.

Her "nurse" is with her—the local sewing centre fitter—to mould her exactly to your figure. She will help you solve your fitting problems.

You can have her moulded with a slightly wider right shoulder than left—if that is your peculiar problem. Or you can have her with one hip slightly higher than the other, if that is your distinctive feature. You can give her the touch that makes you "you" to your friends, but which means pattern headaches when you are fitting a costume. Then, when you fit your new dress, your "home-made" outfit will follow a perfect line for you—like a costume-made costume from Paris.

You are not the only woman who has variations from the standard figure. The average woman in Canada, or in the South Sea Islands, for that matter, is in the same boat. You can also vary as much as ten pounds in weight, up or down, without throwing out the accuracy of your dress form.

The dress form can be fitted in half an hour. It is made of durable thermoplastic material, expertly shaped to your exact measurements. The fitter applies it in a soft flexible form. Then it is removed in sections, heated and hardened into a permanent "double." It will stand up to do your bidding, mounted on a stand exactly your height. Covering it is a handy coat of jersey for ease in pinning on patterns. You can carry it — it is very light—and pop it into a closet between sewing sessions.

The local sewing centre will give you three free lessons in how to get the most from your dress form, once you have had it created. This "double" is the only one of its kind in Canada.

WHY GROW OLD?

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

Fill Your Lungs—Don't Leave Them Half Empty

As we all know we must breathe in order to live. Correct breathing is also essential for best nutrition and vitality and beauty. Increased oxidation improves nutrition and speeds up the elimination of the body's waste materials.

Deep breathing exercises have been found to be helpful to those who suffer from insomnia. Such exercises are relaxing and therefore especially fine for tense nervous folk.

Many people breathe very shallowly. We call this chest breathing. The diaphragm does not play as important a role as it should and often only one-half of the capacity of the lungs is used. In order to send the air into all of the lobes of the lungs we should vigorously employ the muscles of the abdomen, the chest, the diaphragm and the back. Inhalation need not be strained if we expand the diaphragm and the abdomen.

If you are tense or sleepless or wish to add zest to your health a few deep breathing exercises are in order.

1. Stand erect. Bend the elbows and clasp the hands behind the head. Keep the arms in this position as you stretch toward the ceiling. You will feel your spine straighten all the way up to your head. Hold this while you count to 10. Relax. Repeat 10 times daily. This gives you the "feel" of good posture which is essential to correct breathing.

2. Lie on the floor on your back with your knees bent and your feet flat on the floor. Arms rest on the floor at your sides. Breathe in deeply and slowly, expanding the diaphragm and the abdomen. Hold the air in the lungs as you pat a gentle tattoo with your hands. Do not pat your stomach but your rib cage. This sends the air into the little air pockets.

OF PERSONAL INTEREST

Miss J. Madeline Clay, vice-president of National Council of Catholic Women's League of Canada, left last week for Regina, Sask., to attend the national convention being held in that city Oct. 11 to 18. Madame Anna Couture, life member of the league, accompanied Miss Clay.

This evening's bride, Miss Leona Hulme was feted at a final pre-nuptial shower given this week by co-hostesses Mrs. B. Palin and Miss Lorna Horwood at home of the former, 1147 Newport Avenue. The bride-elect received a corsage of red rosebuds, Mrs. W. Hulme and mother of the groom-elect, Mrs. R. Aitken, African daisies.

An attractively decorated pink and blue basket contained gifts. Others attending were Mesdames M. Smellie, M. Grant, H. Hughes, H. West, M. Browne, W. Campbell, Misses Louise Young, Gloria Warren, Pat Webber, Joan McIntyre, Fae Browne, Marie Dartt and Ellen Danes.

Two brides-elect, the Misses Lydia Wiltermuth and Martha Mayert, were honored recently with a shower given by staff of Family Allowance and Old Age Security branch. The affair was held at home of Miss Ann Draper, 125 Government Street. Each received a corsage of red roses and gifts of crystal ware from a decorated wishing well. Those present were Mesdames C. Farrell, H. House, P. Pakulak, K. Miller, M. Trimble, M. Robertson, and the Misses M. Roberts, A. Vowles, M. McFadden, P. Love, I. Humberstone, V. Heritage, B. King, A. Wilkinson, N. Cook, M. Greenwood, J. Bailey, P. McCutcheon and H. Bugg.

Nu Phi Mu sorority members entertained at home of bride-elect recently to honor Miss Barbara Oakley, 3830 Saul Street. In compliment to the groom-elect, who is a pilot officer, gifts were contained in a unique red, white and blue box which was topped with an airfield containing hangar and model planes. Pink roses en corsage were presented to the popular bride-elect and pink carnations to Mrs. A. L. Oakley. Others attending were Mrs. S. Lewis and Misses Maureen Quigg, Barbara Osborne, Sharon Smith, Jackie Quest, Jean Hatcher, Joan King, Darlaine Woodburne and Meryl Evenden.

Women of Moose To Hold Bazaar

Victoria Chapter, No. 25, Women of the Moose, will hold a bazaar Friday afternoon at K. of P. hall. R. Hayward, Mooseheart chairman, will open the affair which is being convened by Mrs. E. Cooper.

Various stalls will be convened as follows: Home cooking, Mesdames M. Pearce and M. Jones; homemaking, Mesdames M. Bentham and E. Johnstone; fancy work and dolls, Mesdames M. Morry and M. Groat; white elephant, Mrs. F. Benzie; flowers, Mrs. E. Zarelli; candy, Mesdames O. Eden and B. Stevens; bran tub, Mrs. G. Priddle; stuffed animals, Mrs. M. Kirkwood; bingo, Mrs. M. Carter; afternoon tea, Mesdames M. Ilott and D. Giles; tombolas, Mesdames A. Hopley and D. Crooks; chicken dinner, Mrs. V. Warren.

A dance will be held in the evening, 9 to 12, convened by Mrs. Kirkwood.

Papayas are a melonlike fruit straight from Honolulu. They have an exotic flavor, impossible to describe and a delightful fragrance. The meat of the fruit is a deep pink-orange, somewhat like a cantaloupe. Once you have sampled the island fruit, you will become an enthusiast. Serve it diced in a fruit cup with a lemon-honey dressing. Delightful . . .

Auxiliary's Fall Bridge Tea

Woman's Auxiliary to Royal Jubilee Hospital will hold their annual fall bridge-canasta and tea on Wednesday at 2.30 in the Nurses' Home on Richmond Road. Presiding at the tea table will be Mrs. W. A. McElmoyle, left, and Mrs. N. F. Lockyer, wife of Dr. Lockyer, radiologist at the Victoria Cancer Clinic. Others presiding will be Mrs. Harold L. Webster, president of the Junior Auxiliary, and Mrs. W. Campbell. Mrs. J. Phethean, general convener, will be assisted by Mrs. J. H. Newton. Tea convener is Mrs. Langmuir-Watt. Prizes, and tickets are in charge of Mrs. I. Patterson and can be obtained from Mrs. F. Boughton. Tea will be served between 3 and 5.

AS WE LIVE

Dream of Past Romance—But Work for the Future

By ELIZABETH B. HURLOCK, Ph.D.

Crying over spilled milk will do no good and will only bring unhappiness most of the time. That is why this girl should stop crying:

Hurlock

(Q) "Several years ago, I met a man of whom I saw a good deal. I loved him and he used to talk about marriage. Then someone started to make trouble between us, sending letters and saying things which angered him. He blamed me for them. He broke off with me and married another girl. This hurt a lot. In fact, I almost went out of my mind. I still love him as much as ever and can't seem to forget him. When I see him, it seems as though he wants to talk to me. Can you tell me why he acts like that?"

(A) This young man may realize now the things he believed about you were not true and that he was unfair in breaking off with you without giving you a real chance to explain your side.

The next time you run into him and he behaves as though he wanted to talk to you, stop and talk. Let him get off his chest the things he wants to say. You will both feel better for it. As it is, you both have hurt feelings and regrets.

This should clear the atmosphere and help you acquire a better perspective. But don't have delusions it will make things as they were before. He is married now. You are out of his life forever.

Naturally his behavior was a blow to your pride, as it was to your love. However, you should realize his love for you was not true love or he would not have dissolved your romance.

There were happy times for you when you knew him. Keep those happy memories but start afresh to find someone more worthy of your love. Profit by this bitter experience. If, in the future, someone tries to make trouble between you and a man you care about, set him straight immediately. Don't let yourself again be the victim of a malicious mischief-maker.

Lace Edging Bride's Veil Also Worn by Her Mother

Two popular Victorians were united in marriage Friday evening when Marion Doris, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Garnham, and James Alfred Cambrey, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Cambrey, pledged their vows at St. John's Church.

Rev. Canon George Biddle officiated at the ceremony.

Soloist Arthur Stringer sang "O Perfect Love" and wedding music was played by Frederick Chubb.

The bride, escorted by her father, was lovely in princess style white satin brocade with slight train. Her coronet of orange blossoms and illusion net finger-tip veil edged with fine French lace, had been worn by her mother on her wedding day. White satin streamers cascaded from a shower bouquet of white carnations and pink rapture roses.

Mrs. Mary Morris, gowned in palest pink taffeta with lace bodice, was matron of honor. She held white and shaded pink chrysanthemums.

Flower girl, Frances Pugh, dainty in pale green taffeta, carried a basket of white, pale pink and mauve chrysanthemums.

John Matthews was best man and ushers were Ronald Garnham, brother of the bride, and the groom's brother, Donald Cambrey and uncle, Frank Thame.

At St. John's Memorial Hall the bride's table was centred with a three-tiered wedding cake and white candles in crystal holders. The mothers of the bride and groom welcomed guests with the newlyweds, Mrs. Garnham wearing deep violet and corsage of pale pink rosebuds, and Mrs. Cambrey in rich wine shade, with cream rosebud corsage.

Earl Harcus, the bride's uncle, proposed the toast.

The couple will motor in the Interior before returning to make their home at 939 Falmouth Road.

The bride traveled in a heather worsted suit with navy blue accessories and mauve orchid corsage.

Q How can I best provide for my retirement?

A Through a low cost Mutual Life Retirement policy.

While you are working it safeguards the future of your dependents, then, usually at 60 or 65, it pays a regular monthly income for the rest of your life.

Only life insurance enables you to save for the days when you stop earning and at the same time provide an estate for your loved ones should anything happen to you.

You should discuss this plan for security with a Mutual Life of Canada representative.

Recent Arrivals From Venezuela

Recent arrivals in Victoria, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. P. DuGardein and their young son, Arthur, have come from Venezuela, seeking a home in a temperate climate, a pleasant life and good educational facilities. "If Victoria is as nice as they tell us and we feel at home we will stay," says Mrs. DuGardein. Mr. DuGardein, who is Dutch, left Venezuela upon retirement from the post of marine superintendent of Shell Oil in South America. He had spent 27 years in a country which he describes as "prosperous, but terribly hot and expensive to live in." Mrs. DuGardein is Belgian. Besides Arthur, they have two daughters, one, completing her education at Salem Academy, New Orleans, and the other, married and living in Venezuela. Seven-year-old Arthur, whom they call "Arty," is going to St. Ann's Academy at present. He speaks fluent Spanish and Dutch as well as English, but his parents believe he will soon forget the first two languages, as he becomes a Canadian.

Well-Known Historian To Speak

B. A. McKelvie will address a meeting of Women's Canadian Club, Tuesday, at 2.45 in the Empress Hotel ballroom. His subject will be "Glimpses of Yesterday."

Mr. McKelvie is a native of the Province of British Columbia, who through his researches and writings has done more than almost any other individual to arouse public interest in our heritage. As the author of several volumes of juvenile historical fiction, and of a number of serious historical studies and also through frequent contributions to the press, he has done much to publicize the background and history of the province.

Active Newcomer From Vancouver

Tracey Sheridan, who has moved to Victoria recently with her husband, Byron, lived for a number of years at Deep Cove, Vancouver, where her days were filled with numerous communal activities. She is a student of philosophy and keenly interested in dramatic work. She was a member of North Shore Community Players and Vancouver Little Theatre, taking leading parts with both groups. She has organized children's concerts and conducted classes in creative drama. She has also done some professional writing and was active in the work of the United Church, all of which she hopes to continue in Victoria. She has already made a start, for she has joined the Victoria Theatre Guild and will play a part in the forthcoming "Madwoman of Chaillot."

Patricia Henderson-Douglas Dewar Married in First United Church

A fashionable wedding attracting wide interest in British Columbia united two well-known families this afternoon when Gladys Patricia Henderson exchanged vows with Douglas Adair Dewar. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold W. G. Henderson, Despard Avenue, and the groom the son of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Dewar, Vancouver.

Dr. W. G. Wilson and Rev. Moir A. J. Waters officiated for the couple in First United Church.

Glowing autumn tones in the altar floral arrangement created an attractive foil for the bride, who was exquisite in a gown of ivory chiffon velvet. Designed with slim simplicity, the gown featured a delicate yoke of seed pearls and flowing train. It was complemented with an heirloom veil of handmade Honiton lace. Gardenias and stephanotis formed her crescent bridal bouquet.

The bride was escorted up the aisle by her father to strains of "Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring."

Camellia red taffeta gowns, styled with full bouffant skirts and ivory velvet yokes were chosen by attendants, Miss Janet Henderson, sister of the bride; Miss Terry Castle, Victoria, and Miss Jean Peacock, Vancouver. Creamy-toned bouquets harmonized with their ivory accessories.

Tiny Margo Wade was flower girl in ivory velveteen. A cherry red bouquet matched a colorful garland in her hair. Master Matthew Wade, page boy, wore cherry red velvet trousers and a white blouse. Best man was M. A. MacDonald, Corvallis, Ore. Ushering were Sir Robert Cave-Browne-Cave, Nobel Manzer, Blair Patterson, Vancouver, and Allan Wilson, Victoria. During the signing of the register, J. Roberto Wood sang "The Lord's Prayer."

Bruce Hutchison proposed the toast to the bride at a reception following the ceremony given in the lower lounge, Empress Hotel.

More than 75 guests were present, coming from Vancouver, Cornvallis, Seattle, Penticton and Up-Island.

Upon embarkation for a honeymoon trip to San Francisco and Los Angeles, Mrs. Dewar donned a classic dark grey tailleur with pleated skirt. Completing the outfit was a smoke grey coat, flame red accessories and an orchid corsage. Mr. and Mrs. Dewar will make their home in Vancouver. In March, they plan an 18-month trip to England.

4a FUNERALS

McCORMICK—On October 16, 1952, the remains of the late Mr. Alexander McCormick were laid to rest in Colwood Burial Park, surrounded by the beautiful floral tributes sent by his many friends. The service was conducted by Rev. Douglas B. Carr at McCall Bros. Floral Funeral Chapel. The congregational hymn sung was "Jesu, Lover of My Soul" and "Work for the Night Is Coming" was rendered as an organ voluntary. The following gentlemen served as pallbearers: Messrs. Bill McCormick, Jim McCormick, Dave McCormick, sons of the deceased; Harry Hennis, son-in-law; Arthur Peters and James McGuire.

5 CARDS OF THANKS

The family of the late Mrs. M. Craigdallie wish to express their sincere thanks and appreciation to the many friends for their sympathy and floral tributes. Special thanks to Dr. Bapty, the sisters and nurses at St. Joseph's Hospital, also the pallbearers.

6 IN MEMORIAM

MARTIN—In loving memory of my husband, Cpl. Norman James Martin, 12157.

One year has passed since that sad day,
When one we loved was called away;
God took him home—it was His will,
Within our hearts he liveth still.

—Always remembered by his loving wife and three children, Norma, Vince, Paula.

BRIDGE LESSON

by Oswald Jacoby

South spent many anxious moments in the play of the hand shown today wondering whether or not the club finesse would succeed. When the king of clubs finally showed up where he hoped it would be, South was so overjoyed that he managed to lose his game contract.

West opened a diamond, and dummy won the ace. Declarer now tried out the trumps, discovering that West had a sure trump trick. When West took the queen of spades he returned a diamond, and South ruffed.

The game now depended upon the clubs, and South hopefully led a low club towards dummy.

West naturally played the king of clubs, and South exultantly won the trick with dummy's ace. This was a sad mistake. East could not be prevented from winning a club trick with his jack, whereupon a heart return gave West two heart tricks to defeat the contract.

South should not have been in such a hurry to win the first club trick with dummy's ace. No matter how it went against the grain, he should have allowed West to hold the first round of clubs with the king. Now it would be impossible for East to gain the lead, and South could run the rest of the clubs without loss.

If West then failed to attack the hearts, South would discard a heart on dummy's extra club; and if West led hearts, South's king would win a trick. Either way South would surely make his contract.

IN TUNE WITH THE TIMES

By RAY SIDAWAY

According to Guy Lombardo and his Royal Canadians, "You Belong to Me," holds the No. 1 spot on his show, "Your Hit Parade." "Wish You Were Here," is continuing in the No. 2 spot and "Jambalaya" has moved into third position.

The Lemac jackpot on the "Bob Hawk Show" climbs to $750 for the program Monday. Each time the jackpot is not answered correctly, Bob adds another $250 for the following week.

Beulah says . . . "They say that a home and marriage are a man's castle. I wish one of 'em would lower his drawbridge and let me in."

The first broadcast of "Lux Radio Theatre" was heard on October 3, 1933, and starred John Boles and Miriam Hopkins in "Seventh Heaven."

"My Six Convicts," adapted from the best-selling book and hit motion picture, with Dana Andrews as the prison psychiatrist and Millard Mitchell recreating his original role as the safecracker, will be the fare on Monday's edition of "Lux Radio Theatre."

Songstress Rosemary Clooney, with Dr. Lee de Forest, radio pioneer and inventor, are the guests on C.B.S. Radio's "Edgar Bergen-Charlie McCarthy Show," heard Sunday at 5 and 9 p.m. on KIRO. Dr. de Forest, known to the industry as the "Father of Radio," will be heard in a comedy sketch with "inventor" Charlie McCarthy.

Now Marie Wilson has a boat named for her. Bob Fallon, husband of the "My Friend Irma" star, has tagged his small fishing craft the Mari-Bob.

Doris Day and Donald O'Connor team in a Columbia Record preview of Frank Loesser's "Hans Christian Anderson" score. The C.B.S. songstress and the movie comic duet "No Two People" and "You Can't Lose Me."

At the moment invested in mortgages, repayable by monthly installments, the mortgagee, being of a progressive state of mind is not content to collect these payments together with current rates of interest. He wants to exchange them for first payment in full or as payment on an apartment block, payment in full or in part, on a house, hotel, auto court, prairie farm or Vancouver property. The only answer we know of, is what have you? You might wish to sit back and collect the payments under these mortgages and let our mortgagee assume the responsibility of your property ownership.

MERCHANT'S HUNT MAY BE HARD; QUARRY EXPERIENCED HERBALIST

Among hundreds of applications for skilled specialists filed by employers at the National Employment Office here is one from a Victoria Chinese firm which is seeking an experienced herbalist.

Employment officials said they anticipate they will have trouble in filling the application as there are few people qualified in herbal medicine nowadays.

Other applications from Victoria firms for skilled workers include an experienced furniture cabinet maker, furniture woodworking machinists, veneer matcher, shingler and floor layer.

C. A. Mudge, manager, said there are also a good number of positions available for salesmen.

With regard to the employment picture, Mr. Mudge said the total number of unemployed is less than for the same period of the last two years.

However, he said the employment situation for women has been fairly quiet.

Parents Are Blamed For Juvenile Crime

Retiring Salvation Army Officer Says Wrongdoing Tendencies Begin in Home

TORONTO (CP)—All but 1 per cent of juvenile crime today can be traced to the home, Lt.-Col. Wallace Bunton of the Salvation Army says on his retirement after 46 years in prison work. The youths come from both poor and comfortable homes, and he believes it is a case of parental delinquency rather than juvenile.

Most criminals today are between 16 and 25 years of age, he commented. In his years of service he has had contact with 250,000 men criminals. When he began prison work, the majority behind bars were older men, but today most prisoners are under 25.

Lieut.-Col. Bunton blames divorces and broken homes for the juvenile crime wave. Other reasons he gives are crime magazines, books, movie and radio shows flooding the country, lack of religious training and the absence of the family altar, and the general indifference of the community.

As the remedy he suggests community supervised playgrounds, recreation centres and entertainment.

During his career he has visited every prison in Canada and many in the United States. He was spiritual adviser to 18 men under sentence of death. He says all confessed their sins before going to the gallows and expressed their belief they were being justly punished.

Canadian prisons, reformatories and penitentiaries have never been so well equipped as they are now, or the prisoners so well cared for, he says.

V.C. General Guest Of Fighting 'Pats'

Maj.-Gen. G. R. Pearkes, V.C., M.P., was a special guest at a Friday night annual smoker of the P.P.C.L.I. in the Canadian Scottish mess at Bay Street Armory.

Close to 75 present and former soldiers attended, including Patricias who fought with the regiment in Korea.

Other guests and Patricias at the party were Col. Cameron Ware, O.C. of Royal Roads, formerly of the Seaforth Highlanders of Canada, Vancouver; Col. R. Mitchell, Harriss Turner, Maj. S. Norrington, Capt. A. McFarlane, Capt. George Harrison (president of the P.P.C.L.I. local branch), Lieut. Hugh Thorburn (vice-president) and H. Piper.

Gerry Gosley and his Smile Show troup provided entertainment.

B.C. Forestry Firm Team in New Zealand

The B.C. forestry engineering firm of C. D. Schultz & Co. has sent a team of six foresters and engineers to New Zealand, officials said today.

The team is headed by C. D. Schultz, B.C.R.F., P. Eng. The project is for the Tasman Pulp and Paper Company Limited of New Zealand, who are constructing a pulp and paper mill development. The B.C. firm is engaged on the forestry aspects of the development. Sandwell and Company Limited of Vancouver are the consulting engineers for the development.

C. D. Schultz & Company is presently carrying on similar work in the southwestern United States. Assignments have also been carried out in British Guiana, New Guiana and other far distant points.

In British Columbia projects both large and small are continually being carried out for timber holders, logging and mill operators, banks, trust companies and other financial institutions. Presently the company is carrying on the inventory and valuation of timber on the right-of-way for the Trans Mountain pipeline between Vancouver and the Alberta border.

Lawyers Hope to Cut Provincial Call Fee

Law Society of Upper Canada Moving On Parallel Line With Canadian Body

TORONTO, Oct. 18 (CP)—The Law Society of Upper Canada Friday proposed sweeping changes in the regulations governing transfer of lawyers from one province to another.

The Ontario body urged the law societies of other Canadian provinces to meet immediately to approve these proposals:

1. Abolition of the special call fee required when a member of the bar of one province wishes to practice in another province. This fee is as high as $1,500 in some provinces.

2. That a lawyer wishing to plead a case in another province may do so without paying a call fee.

In this connection D. Park Jamieson of Sarnia, Ont., chairman of the Law Society's committee on uniform standards of admission to the bar, cited the recent case of John Diefenbaker, Progressive Conservative Member of Parliament, who was required to pay a call fee of $1,500 in British Columbia to plead a case there.

UNDER CONSIDERATION

J. Howard Harman, president of the Victoria Bar Association, said today that the proposals raised by the Upper Canada Law Society had been considered at the last convention of the Canadian Bar Association, which met this year in Vancouver.

Mr. Harman said the matters were still under study by a committee of the national organization, and that a report containing specific recommendations would likely be filed by the committee at the next convention.

Mr. Harman explained call fees were last raised in B.C. following the Second World War to protect the interest of the many B.C. law students coming back from overseas.

He said the step was taken when there appeared to be a danger of lawyers from other provinces coming into B.C. in such large numbers as to push the up-and-coming B.C. students aside.

RECIPROCITY HOPE

On the matter of maintaining call fees, Mr. Harman said most members of the Victoria Bar Association favored reciprocal arrangements between provinces.

"If Alberta, for example, decides to levy a $100 call fee on lawyers from B.C., we should charge Alberta lawyers the same. At the same time, if Ontario maintains a fee of $1,500, we should require Ontario lawyers coming here to pay the same fee to us."

Mr. Harman saw merit in the proposal to do away with call fees when a lawyer wished to take a special case in a province other than his own.

SPECIAL CASE

"There are special circumstances where that should be allowed" he conceded.

He cited the situation which exists in British Columbia's Peace River country.

"The Peace River is linked so closely to Alberta it is not particularly served by British Columbia lawyers. To allow Alberta lawyers to take cases there, when they arise, would do no particular harm."

W. H. M. Haldane, treasurer of the British Columbia Bar Association, was in Vancouver today and not available for comment.

OLD-TIME BANDIT-CHASER DIES AT 92; WAS AT 15 HANGINGS

SANTA MONICA, Calif., Oct. 18 (AP)—William Anson (Bill) Loomis, 92, perhaps the last of the law oficers who dealt with the bandits of the old west, died Friday.

He was personally acquainted with such figures as Jesse James, Billy the Kid, Pat Garrett, Red Kelley and Wyatt and Morgan Earp. He claimed to have officiated at 15 hangings.

Loomis was a cowpuncher in the Las Cruces, N.M., area before he became city marshal at Leadville, Colo.

ATTENTION ALL BOWLERS

That's Right! Art's A Young Man of 72

Old age? Don't mention that odious phrase in the presence of Art Marchant. He refused to recognize its existence.

At an age where many men forget competitive sports, Marchant is the talk of Capital City Bowladrome.

Marchant, 72 years old, is scorching the alleys and is leading the men's Commercial Five-Pin League with a snappy 252 average. But that's not all.

In the major league, Marchant is third with a 238 and just to keep in trim he is eighth in the classic singles league with a 225 mark. That age again is 72.

Cy Wallis tops the major five-pin league and all the alley bowlers with a 265 average and is followed by Marchant with his 252 mark. A total of 32 bowlers hold averages of 220 or better.

Mary Chayko leads the female trundlers with a 238 average, followed by May Wallis at 232.

Top averages follow.

Bucceroni in Narrow Victory

NEW YORK, Oct. 18 (AP)—Favored Danny Bucceroni piled up a big lead and needed every bit of it Friday night to gain a narrow but unanimous 10-round decision over husky Dave Davey of Tacoma, Wash., at St. Nicholas arena.

A 2-to-1 choice, Bucceroni weighed 187½—the heaviest of his career—to Davey's 211.

The lanky, 24-year-old Philadelphia floored Davey for nine in the second round and that proved to be the difference in the scoring.

"PEEK" AT THIS

This elderly lady said to me, "a baby carriage I'd like to see." "Why—yes," I beamed, "if you'll come this way, we've the "GENDRON" line, a grand display." "MY," she surveyed, "you DO have a lot, to the color, I haven't given a thot." She looked them over, as ladies do, & finally decided on the "blue." "Your daughter will LOVE this handle-grip, & with this new suspension, it cannot tip." "My daughter," she replied, "lives in Guelph, so I'm buying this carriage for my-SELF." "OH," I said, & I guess I did stare, as I thot of her age, & saw her white hair?? "You know," she went on, "just the other day, I had my old carriage in the Safeway, & some people came up & got me SO riled, said I would suffocate ANY child, by leaving it alone, & away down there, out of sight & out of air. I shooed them away, eyes open wide, & stuffed my groceries there beside. People are nosey, My Goodness Me, why can't they just let me be?? My baby I K-N-O-W, wouldn't suffocate, & the sides were all cracked in that old crate. And a wheel fell off, on the way home, but I love THIS carriage, & the shiny chrome." "Yes," I enthused, "& with these new kind of springs, you'll think this carriage really has wings. May I send it?" I said, as she paid the low fee. "No," she replied, "I'll take it with me." "Why yes—of course," & I yanked off the tag, still thinking this was some sort of gag. "I'm meeting my husband, & the two of us, are visiting friends, we're not allowed on the bus. I really don't mind, it's such a nice day, My Goodness this carriage, seems nothing to weigh. Baby just loves it out in the air," friend husband outside was waiting there. He held their baby on his arm, she sure was cute & stacked with charm. He was stroking her hair, her curly head, she looked real healthy & very well-fed. Baby leaped in the carriage with the greatest of ease, then these "kids" wheeled away their cute PEKINESE . . . from

Mrs. Georgina Bruce of 1012 Chamberlain St., had her name on the coupon drawn by Ed. Farey over CKDA on Thursday afternoon . . . so SHE is the lucky winnah of the gorgeous Torchiere which we offered as the door prize at the "Young Canada Home." We took the lamp around to Mrs. Bruce's home at supper time, and the whole family let their supper get cold in all the excitement. what d'ye know

"WHAT D'YE KNOW" is today more than a genial Greeting. It is indicative of today's pace in living. People KNOW more—have to know more—than their forebears of a couple of generations ago.

Kids today in Primary School—students in University—Businessmen—Homemakers—all have to learn more, and know more, to keep abreast of the multitude of developments and progress in the world today.

As a requisite of good citizenship, and in social life, men and women simply have to know, and be well-informed about what is going on in their local community and in the world at large.

That is why Newspapers, with their ever-mounting circulations, have to supply more and more information, news and commentaries.

And what about news and information concerning the things we all need in the enjoyment of our standards of living today!

what d'ye know ABOUT VALUES IN THE THINGS YOU BUY...

EVERYONE—no matter what Income or size of Pay Envelope—is perpetually concerned in getting the best merchandise, food, clothing, furniture—at the lowest cost!

We all are looking for something better, for ourselves and for our children. That is why the advertisements in the Newspapers are so useful, so informative, so valuable, so full of "KNOW".

Manufacturers and Retailers, who advertise in Newspapers, let you know they want your business. Of course they do . . . but they let you KNOW what's new—what's better—what's most economical!

Next time you plan to shop, think over that expression—"WHAT D'YE KNOW"—and take note of how much the advertisements in this Paper can help you.

This Newspaper is dedicated to supply you with the best in News Services, and is proud of its contribution to your Local and World-wide information. It is also happy that it provides the vehicle, in Display and Classified Advertising, that carries the answer to essential WHAT-D'YE-KNOW-INFORMATION, through which you get the best in your personal, social and household needs.

THE DOCTOR SAYS

Planned Retirement Program Good Thing

By EDWIN P. JORDAN, M.D.

Part of a long letter from a reader will serve to introduce a most important subject. She writes:

"I learned early about how an inferiority complex develops by having to wear peculiar clothes, and by having no time for play or social adjustment. Another lesson that just came naturally was that if I intended to survive I was going to have to fight back occasionally. Is it any wonder that I soon developed a critical, suspicious, distrustful dislike for people?"

This reader says she married at 19, has two sons, and now 23 years have passed. She adds:

"But now, with the boys away at school most of the time, my home is like a morgue and days drag, and I am wondering about what to do with the remaining 30 or so years of my life. I am really not so elderly that I can't develop new interests, even if I do wear glasses for reading, sewing and close work, but I have got to change my attitude toward people."

This reader presents a problem with which millions, roughly between the ages of 40 and 55, are faced in varying degrees. The busy years of raising children to the point where they are more or less independent and adult slip by rapidly, and suddenly the mothers, in particular, are faced with carving out new interests and activities to replace those which kept them busy for so many years.

Practically the same problem hits the fathers, too, but later—when they come near the time to retire from their life work. Both problems, however, are similar.

Most human beings who are not physically or mentally incapacitated do not take well to doing nothing. Consequently, planning and adjusting either to the growth of a family or retirement requires some intelligent thought, preferably before these events actually occur.

TRY USEFUL ACTIVITY

Some useful activity which the person likes and does well is what is most desirable. Recently, a pamphlet has come to my attention which seems to me should be of particular value, and, while designed for those who are about to retire, it should be almost equally useful for those who are like the writer of the letter quoted at the beginning of this column.

This pamphlet is called "Getting Ready to Retire," and can be obtained from the non-profit educational organization known as the Public Affairs Committee, 22 E. 38th St., New York 16, N.Y., for 25 cents.

RARE GIFT

Langdale Seascape Donated

A new addition to permanent collection of the Arts Centre of Greater Victoria, a seascape titled "Tintagel Castle" served as "piece de resistance" for the visit of the Governor-General.

Presented by Miss Stella Langdale, daughter of the artist, M. A. Langdale, it is a Turner Gold Medal picture. The latter honor originated in 1865 when John Ruskin, leading British art critic of that day, inaugurated the medal to spur production of land and seascape painting in the Royal Academy School. The "Tintagel Castle" won the first medal.

The painting depicts Donechenir, traditionally the fortress of King Arthur, on the craggy stone coast of Cornwall.

Curator Colin Graham disclosed that official opening by Canadian Governor-General Vincent Massey was highlighted by famed art patron's remark, "The jury show represented a marked step forward from the state of painting on Vancouver Island two years ago."

Mr. Graham added Mr. Massey felt the show was "alive and vital," with a change in style indicating greater maturity.

U.B.C. Law School's Head to Speak at Dalhousie Function

Bus, Truck Pilot Seen As 'Knight of Highway'

A group of city truck drivers, bus drivers and police officers were guests of the Victoria Times and the Odeon Theatre Friday for a showing of a short feature, "Knights of the Highways."

The film showed some of the many courteous and sometimes life-saving services performed as part of the daily routine of the 6,000,000 truck drivers of the United States. Comments of the interested audience indicated the same services are performed here.

The picture's message was geared to suit the understanding of the average theatre-goer as well, and perhaps for this reason lacked specialization of safe driving habits, in the opinion of one R.C.M.P. member present. R.C.M.P. Staff Sergeant Locke, however, classed the screening as "good public relations."

The film showed truckers assisting at accidents and helping with accident prevention. It also disclosed how major hauling firms employ spotter vehicles to check on the safe-driving habits of their own drivers, and how employees are encouraged to drive better through such side activities as truck "rodeos."

There were minor inaccuracies in the filming of the sequence which showed an injured person dragged from a wreck in a manner not supported by first aid experts, observed B.C.E. driver A. Jenner.

An incident where a 10-gear trailer truck went out of control was also hard for Mr. Jenner to accept. He feels any experienced driver would have his motor geared down before approaching a steep down-grade.

A. Beattie, also a bus driver, spoke for most of the group in attendance when he said that the inaccuracies were outweighed by the valuable portent of the film. "It will help the general public to understand the problems of truck-drivers," he said.

Arts Centre Given $1,000 Gift Cheque

Praises voiced by Governor-General Vincent Massey during his tour of the Arts Centre of Greater Victoria, have resulted in the donation of $1,000 by Princess Chikhmatoff, it was learned today.

Mrs. George Masters, publicity committee head for Arts Centre, announced today that although much public attention has been diverted to the Moss Street cultural centre recently, the donation by Princess Chikhmatoff represents the most important type of assistance at this time, and will be greatly appreciated.

Princess Chikhmatoff is a daughter of well-known Butchart family.

President Mrs. Hildegarde Wyllie said recently, "It is estimated that a minimum of $10,000 will be required to complete conversion of Spencer House into a suitable gallery and arts centre."

Neo-Nazi Groups Known to Exist In Germany; Lack Leader to Unify

By WELLINGTON LONG

BONN, Germany, Oct. 18—Twenty-six known neo-Nazi organizations are now operating in West Germany, but authorities believe they will present no real danger unless a leader strong enough to units them appears.

The neo-Nazis jumped back into the news recently with the announcement that the largest of the groups, the Socialist Reich's party, with a paid-up membership of 40,000, was dissolving itself.

The first explanation for this move was that the constitutional court in Karlsruhe was about to declare the party illegal. A second explanation, put out by the Socialists who control the provincial government in lower Saxony, where the S.R.P. garnered 11 per cent of the total popular vote in the election 16 months ago, was that the 16 S.R.P. deputies now will join with the other Conservative parties to overthrow the Socialist regime.

NEO-NAZIS IN PARLIAMENT

No one actually believes, however, that the political organization so carefully built up on what was approaching a national scale by S.W.P. leaders will now be thrown away.

Until now, the known neo-Nazi groups have been unable to unite, mainly because of personal jealousy among the various leaders and because of lack of funds.

Nevertheless, the neo-Nazis do have two members in the West parliament—Wolfgang Hedler, a rabid anti-Semite, and Fritz Dorls, a charter member of the S.R.P. A third neo-Nazi deputy, Franz Richter, was thrown out of parliament last year, when it was learned he was using an assumed name to hide a highly colored wartime Nazi background.

All the neo-Nazi groups base their main political attack on the western allies and the pro-western Bonn government, so much so that many authorities believe them to be subsidized by the Communists.

Distinguished U.K. Actor Will Judge Drama Festival

OTTAWA, Oct. 18 (CP)—John Allen, distinguished United Kingdom actor, stage manager and playwright, will adjudicate Canada's 13 regional drama festivals to be held next June.

This was announced today by Richard MacDonald, Dominion Drama Festival executive secretary-treasurer.

The 40-year-old London stage veteran, who began his career at the famous Old Vic, will open the strenuous 10-week adjudication tour in Ottawa Jan. 12, then swing east to Quebec and the Maritimes, west to the Prairies and Pacific Coast and finally end the tour at St. John's, Nfld., March 26.

Currently with the B.B.C., Mr. Allen has gained international theatre experience through the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization. However, this will be his first visit to Canada and his first opportunity to study the stature of Canada's amateur theatre movement.

Body Identified As Plane Passenger

TOKYO, Oct. 18 (AP)—The United States Air Force said today a body washed ashore near a South Korean coastal airfield Friday had been identified as that of a passenger on a C-46 Courier plane that disappeared Thursday with 25 persons abpard.

ANSCOMB TO QUIT AS TORY LEADER

Urges Followers to Action At Vancouver Meeting

VANCOUVER, Oct. 18 (CP)—With a parting exhortation to his followers to fight "every election, everywhere at every time," Herbert Anscomb today confirmed reports of his decision to resign as provincial leader of the Progressive Conservative Party.

Beaten in his own Oak Bay riding in the June 12 balloting which also saw all but four of the party's other standard bearers defeated, the bluff, bull-necked Mr Anscomb made his intentions known in a speech to the annual meeting of the British Columbia Progressive Conservative Association.

He declined comment on a dispatch from Victoria which hinted he may be approached to run as a Progressive Conservative candidate for the capital city in the next federal election. The dispatch said the offer would be made if Mr. Anscomb retired from the provincial field.

In announcing his retirement, Mr Anscomb said: "My own view is that there should be a convention as rapidly as you can get one. I propose . . . to tender my resignation to that convention."

LEADER SINCE 1946

Party leader since 1946, he was in fighting fettle for what may have been his last appearance on the job. He insisted that the Progressive Conservative showing in June was "not bad at all." He reminded his listeners that the coalition with the Liberals was maintained until early 1952 "not because I said so, but because you in convention instructed me to."

He said he had urged Conservative associations in both Similkameen and Columbia ridings to contest the Nov. 24 by-elections in which the Social Credit government hopes to win seats for two non-member cabinet ministers.

"Unless a man who is running a business keeps his goods before the public, they will finally go off the market. And that is true, too, of politics."

Then he declared, "I want to say that the Conservative Party should fight every election, everywhere at every time."

The younger members were in a fighting mood as the 75 delegates gathered. Led by Arthur (Slim) McCarthur, the party's North Vancouver candidate in June, and Kamloops M.P. Davie Fulton, they moved to set aside the order of routine business proposed by association president Major-General G. R. Pearkes, V.C.

They wanted immediate discussion on a convention date. But their amendment was defeated, 46 to 29.

Heroes of the Sea

THE CAINE MUTINY

(Beginning a 60-Part Serial of Herman Wouk's Best-Selling Novel of Naval War)

By HERMAN WOUK

It was not mutiny in the old-time sense, of course, with flashing of cutlasses, a captain in chains, and desperate sailors turning outlaws. After all, it happened in 1944 in the United States Navy. But the court of inquiry recommended trial for mutiny, and the episode became known as "the Caine mutiny" throughout the service.

The story begins with Willie Keith because the event turned on his personality as the massive door of a vault turns on a small jewel bearing.

CHAPTER 1

He was of medium height, somewhat chubby, and good looking, with curly red hair and an innocent, gay face, more remarkable for a humorous air about the eyes and large mouth than for any strength of chin or nobility of nose. He had graduated from Princeton in 1941 with high marks in all subjects except mathematics and sciences. His academic specialty had been comparative literature. But his real career at Princeton had consisted of playing the piano and inventing bright little songs for parties and shows.

He kissed his mother good-bye on the sidewalk near the corner of Broadway and 116th Street in New York City, on a cold sunny morning in December, 1942. The family Cadillac was parked beside them, its motor running, but maintaining a well-bred silence. Around them stood the dingy grey-and-red buildings of Columbia University.

"Don't you think," said Mrs. Keith, smiling bravely, "that we might stop in that drug store first and have a sandwich?"

She had driven her son to the midshipmen school from their home in Manhasset, despite Willie's protests. Willie had wanted to take the train. It would have seemed more like departing for the wars; he did not like being escorted to the gates of the Navy by his mother. But Mrs. Keith had prevailed as usual.

"The Navy'll feed me, Mom. Don't worry."

He kissed her for the second time and glanced nervously about, hoping that no military men were observing the overtender scene. Mrs. Keith pressed his shoulder lovingly.

"I know you'll do wonderfully, Willie. Just as you always have."

"Aye, aye, Mother." Willie strode along the brick walk past the School of Journalism, and down a few steps to the entrance of Furnald Hall, formerly a dormitory for law students. A grizzled, pudgy Navy chief with four red service stripes on his blue coat stood in the doorway. Mimeographed papers in his hand flapped in the breeze. Willie wondered whether to salute, and swiftly decided that the gesture did not go well with a brown raglan coat and green pork-pie hat. He had completely forgotten his mother.

The chief opened the door invitingly. Willie Seward Keith stepped out of the sunshine across the threshold. It was done as easily and noiselessly as Alice's stepping through the looking glass; and like Alice, Willie Keith passed into a new and exceedingly strange world.

With forty other upright pink animals he was herded into a large examination room. His lungs, liver, heart, eyes, ears, all the apparatus he had been using since birth, were investigated by hard-eyed pharmacists' mates, who prodded and poked him like suspicious women about to buy a turkey in the market.

Next the Navy now dressed him in blue jumper and trousers, black shoes, black socks, and a perky sailor hat, marked with the special blue stripe of a midshipman. Then it filled his arms with books of all shapes, colors, sizes, and degrees of wear, and told his room was on the top floor of the dormitory.

When Willie reached the top floor, he walked down the hall, scanning the names posted outside each room, and found a door labeled:

Room 1013
Keefer
Keith
Keggs

He went in, and dropped the books on the bare springs of a cot. He heard the twang of springs again directly behind him.

"My name's Keggs," said the horse face, poking an arm toward him. Willie shook the hand, which enveloped his in a big moist grip.

"I'm Keith."

FINAL ★★★★ BULLETINS

English Horse Wins Big Race

LAUREL, Md., Oct. 19 (AP)—English-bred Wilwyn closed with a rush in the final eighth of a mile today to win the first running of the $50,000 Washington, D.C., international race before a record crowd of 26,014 at Laurel Park.

Owned by Robert Boucher, the four-year-old son of Pink Flower-Saracen broke the course record, running the 1½-mile turf course in 2.30 4-5, compared to the mark of 2.36 set last October by Thiercelin.

Indian Hemp, owned by Max Bell of Calgary, lone Canadian horse in the field and the only three-year-old, was an also ran.

Douks May Seek Leader in Russia

VANCOUVER, B.C., Oct. 18 (CP) — British Columbia's 10,000 Doukhobors may seek a new leader in Russia.

It was reported today that the Soviet Union has sent an invitation to W. A. Soukeress, prominent member of the Orthodox Doukhobors, to visit Russia and discuss the problems of the strange religious sect.

Red Army in Korea Said 1,000,000

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., Oct. 18 (Reuters) — United Nations forces in Korea face a Communist army of more than 1,000,000 men, mainly Chinese Communist troops deployed in depth, the Allied command reported to the General Assembly today.

Former Quebec Chief Justice Dies

JOLIETTE, Que., Oct. 18 (CP)—Sir Mathias Tellier, former chief justice of Quebec, died today while on his way to the post office to get his mail.

Sir Mathias, who would have been 92 next Jan. 15, was chief justice of the Quebec superior court from 1916 to 1920, when he was appointed to the Quebec court of appeals, later becoming chief justice.

Prince George Runs Aground In Heavy Fog

Four Pacific Salvage Company tugs this morning rushed to the aid of the Canadian National Railways' newest cruise ship, Ss. Prince George, after she nosed into Ripple Point in Johnstone Strait.

The ship pulled herself off the point after she had lost her starboard propeller.

The luxury liner was still at her anchorage in Knox Bay at noon today with tugs standing by. The fog had lifted.

Under an escort of tugs, she is expected to sail shortly under her own steam for Vancouver, arriving there Sunday morning.

The ship's run will be taken over by the Ss. Prince Rupert Monday night, a company spokesman said.

Albert Smith, Victoria manager of Pacific Salvage, reported that Capt. Ed Caldwell of Prince George, said by radio-telephone that the ship's pumps were handling the small amount of water she was taking.

HEADING SOUTH

She was heading south through Johnstone Strait in dense fog at 3.26 a.m. when she glanced off Ripple Point, where rocks jut out from the coast of Vancouver Island near the entrance to Seymour Narrows. She suffered slight damage forward, as well as serious damage to a propeller.

The tug Skeena Beaver dropped her log tow when Prince George wirelesed for aid, and reached the ship at 8 a.m. Three other tugs, Rosario Straits, Charlotte Straits, and Nanaimo Chief, were expected at the scene at noon today.

None of the 260 passengers or 130 crewmen were injured, and the shipmaster did not plan to have them taken off.

Fear of Reds Leads Chinese To Take Life

Young Immigrant Dies in Alberta

ROCKY MOUNTAIN HOUSE, Alta., Oct. 18 (CP)—Police reported that a 21-year-old Chinese who came to Canada only five months ago took his own life here Friday. Friends said Gin Kwong Ken feared Communists would get him.

Sam Mah, owner of the restaurant at which the lad was working, said Gin became despondent after receiving a letter from his parents in China in which they urged him to return home because the Communists were forcing them to get him back.

Mr. Mah said his employee broke down and freely told those at the restaurant of his troubles. "The Communists have my father and mother and they will get me," Ken was quoted as saying.

Police said Ken died in hospital five hours after he had cut his throat with a butcher knife in his room.

Coal Strike Threatens U.S.

350,000 'Certain' to Walk Out Monday; Wage Board Cuts Award

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18 (CP)—The Wage Stabilization Board today chopped 21 per cent off the $1.90-daily wage boost won from coal operators by John L. Lewis.

It was taken for granted the refusal to approve the full amount would set off a general mine strike.

Public members of the board, headed by Chairman Archibald Cox, joined with industry members in knocking 40 cents off the increase. Labor members voted to approve the full $1.90.

150,000 OUT

More than 150,000 of Lewis' miners already had walked off the job in a protest strike this week when their October pay cheques failed to include the raise.

Few mines work over the week-end, but a general shutdown was expected to occur Monday.

Coal stockpiles in the hands of consumers averaged about 80 days and no immediate industrial or home heating effect from the anticipated strike was expected.

The W.S.B. ruling on the case was a major surprise. Cox told a press conference that the $1.50 gives the soft-coal miners "equal treatment" with other wage groups, most of whom he said "will have received measurably less."

Approval of the full amount, Cox said, would have provided a wage increase "greater than any consistent with an honest stabilization program."

The decision affects some 350,000 miners in soft-coal pits. A new contract for hard-coal miners is now being negotiated.

Cox said Lewis and the soft-coal operators have been notified that their contract is illegal and inflationary and that the wage boost must be cut back.

The coal case involved no dispute between Lewis and the industry. The question was only whether the increase they negotiated was legal and not inflationary.

Long Fishing Strike Ended

VANCOUVER, Oct. 18 (CP).—The longest strike in the history of the West Coast fishing industry sputtered out today. Between 3,000 and 4,000 salmon fishermen had tied up their boats for 41 days.

The United Fishermen and Allied Workers' Union (T.L.C.) announced that its members had voted 70 per cent in favor of an agreement worked out by Premier W. A. C. Bennett and Labor Minister Lyle Wicks. The fishermen are expected to return to sea Sunday or Monday. The operators had accepted the settlement terms earlier this week.

The fishermen tied up the salmon fleet September 6 for maintenance of last year's prices for chum salmon—between eight and 11 cents a pound, according to area. The operators originally offered 5½ cents.

Under the accepted settlement terms, the fishermen will get six to eight cents a pound.

Liberals Delay Naming New Leader

B.C. Liberal executive committeemen have decided to postpone the all-important business of choosing a new provincial party leader until next sprnig.

Decision to delay was made by the advisory council of the B.C. Liberal Association, meeting in Vancouver. The ruling meant a cancellation of the association which was scheduled for Nov. 14 and 15 at Penticton.

The convention will be rescheduled around Easter, when the Commons has its spring recess.

The two new federal cabinet ministers, Fisheries Minister Sinclair and Solicitor-General Campney, may have had something to do with the decision. They arrived in Vancouver Friday morning and went immediately to the advisory council meeting, which was held behind closed doors.

Mr. Campney denied he'd returned from Ottawa to tell B.C. Liberals what they should do, but he made it clear he disagreed with the decision of Liberals not to contest the two provincial by-elections scheduled for November in the interior.

COST M-G-M $700,000

Temperament Ends Lanza Movie Career

BY JAMES BACON

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 18 (AP).—Is Mario Lanza through in the movies?

Yes, a check of top industry disclosed today. The movie-makers, almost to a man, believe the booming tenor sang past the finish in his row with M-G-M over the ill - fated "Student Prince."

Lanza failed to show up for the picture although other members of the cast, including co-stars Ann Blythe and Edmund Gwenn hung around for a week until the production was canceled.

The movie moguls hold that an artist can be temperamental before a picture starts production. In fact, then it often makes good publicity. But when temperament sets in after production that costs money. It cost M.G.M. $700,000, the studio claims, and in this day of rising television and declining movie box office, that's a sin not easily absolved.

Lanza himself is mum to charges that he is a super-eccentric in a town where eccentricity is the norm of behavior; that he is a fellow kicking $1,000,000 a year in the face; that he desperately is trying to ruin his career.

Lanza is not only on suspension from M-G-M but also the defendant in a studio suit for $5,195,888 damages. That represents M-G-M's claim of loss from the shelving of the picture, plus $4,500,000 in anticipated profits. The latter figure is a conservative one. Lanza's "The Great Caruso" grossed $19,000000 its first year and some countries haven't been heard from yet.

CITY EQUALS FALL MARK FOR DAYS WITHOUT RAIN

Today Victoria equalled a 1935 record of 21 consecutive rainless days in the late September-early-October period, and far surpassed the former October record of 14 days without rain, set in 1945.

Although a spattering of rain fell between Sept. 5 and 11—0.21 inch—the last rain of any consequence occurred Aug. 22, when a total of 0.21 inch fell between 5.30 a.m. and 1.30 p.m.

Previous to that the only rain worthy of mention was a fall of 0.70 inch on July 22.

Total for the first nine months of the year is only 10.52 inches, compared with average fall for this period of 15.19 inches.

Indications are that the present drought will continue. The weather forecast predicts some cloud on Sunday, caused by a disturbance to the south, but there will be sunny periods during the day, according to the weatherman.
